MISFIT COWBOY

Brian Patton tamed Roscoe, a Texas Longhorn, to do horse tricks.

By Tammi Arender
LSU AgCenter

EPPS, La. - It's not easy being the third of seven boys, Brian Patton of Epps, Louisiana says with a smile. The son of an Ag teacher in West Carroll Parish, the social interaction and entertainment for this male tribe usually came through 4-H. "Every summer of my childhood, from 4-H Camp at Grant Walker till I graduated High School, I had some sort of 4-H activity", said Patton. "It absolutely shaped who I am today."

His love of the land and livestock has birthed a new dream in this 36-year-old farrier (horseshoer). Brian has tamed a Texas Longhorn. Roscoe is now a bridled bovine that Brian has doing tricks that many see others do with horses. "This all started when I woke up just after midnight on December 21, 2014 and decided my life wasn't where I thought it should be," said this self-labeled Misfit Cowboy. "I got a notebook, and for the first time ever, wrote down goals for my life. One of which is to be a performer at the NFR-National Finals Rodeo, the super bowl of rodeos."

So Patton decided his leadable and teachable Texas

Longhorn could help him reach that goal. From climbing to the top of a 20 foot trailer to kneeling and bowing with Brian on his backside, Roscoe is wowing audiences at area festivals and rodeos. "If you're going to dream, dream big", says Patton. "It takes no more energy to dream big than it does to dream small."

Brian Patton makes one of a kind spurs, jewelry and knives.

Patton also pours his creative energy into making one of a kind spurs, jewelry, and knives. His work with steel and metal as a farrier has forged an entirely new career. "The spur making is probably my favorite because it's the most difficult," said this artist at heart. "I don't want things to be easy. I want to get better. In everything that I do."

While Brian continues to shoe horses, his main focus is Roscoe and his rodeo act. In between his performances and making his uncommon metal works, he also does motivational speaking and preaching. He's got his little red wagon loaded up but he's up to the task of pulling it and if he's not, there's always Roscoe!

Louisiana Agriculture & Forestry Today

USDA Designates Natural Disaster Areas

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) designated seven counties in Arkansas as primary natural disaster areas due to losses caused by excessive rain, flash flooding, flooding, hail, high winds and lightning that occurred from March 8, 2016 and continuing. As a result, some Louisiana farmers could be eligible for assistance.

In accordance with section 321

(a) of the Consolidated Farm and Rural Development Act, counties and parishes in adjacent states are named as contiguous disaster areas. Louisiana producers in East Carroll, Morehouse, Union and West Carroll parishes are eligible for low interest emergency loans from USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA), provided eligibility requirements are met.

Farmers in eligible areas have eight months from the date of the declaration to apply for loans to help cover part of their actual losses.

The seven Arkansas counties that are designated primary disaster areas include: Ashley, Chicot, Fulton, Lawrence, Lonoke, White and Woodruff. The contiguous Arkansas counties are: Arkansas, Baxter, Bradley, Cleburne, Craighead, Cross, Desha, Drew, Faulkner, Greene, Independence, Izard, Jackson, Jefferson, Monroe, Prairie, Pulaski, Randolph, St. Francis, Sharp and Union.

East Carroll, Morehouse, Union and West Carroll parishes are contiguous to these Arkansas counties that are impacted by the excessive rain and flooding.

Local FSA offices can provide affected farmers with further information.

AgCenter weed scientist Daniel Stephenson will talk about controlling ryegrass and pigweed, and AgCenter engineer Stacia Davis will talk about irrigation. Lunch will be provided after the program at the AgCenter office in Bastrop.

La. Tech University livestock farm production sale

The first Saturday in May of each year, students at Louisiana Tech University conduct a farm production sale. This year was the 46th annual livestock sale. Louisiana Tech in Ruston is the only university in the state where students raise and sell livestock.

“We really get hands on experience this way,” said senior Maggie Morgan. Morgan, who heads to LSU Veterinary School in the fall, says she grew up overseas where her parents were missionaries. She was never around livestock until she went to college.

“I’ve gained a deep appreciation for agriculture that I did not have before. When you deal with people’s livelihood, you gain a different perspective,” added Morgan.

Between 30-40 students participate in the sale. This year, the students raised about $104,000. Last year, the sale grossed approximately $120,000. The money goes back into the livestock division and toward student scholarships in the Agricultural Sciences program at Louisiana Tech.

“This year’s sale was conducted as a video auction so our students would be able to experience some of the latest technology in marketing. Students were involved in the sale planning, videoing of the animals, and conducting the actual sale,” said Dr. William Green, D.V.M., who serves as Interim Director for the School of Agricultural Sciences and Forestry.

This year, the students sold 47 head of cattle, six hogs, five horses and one lamb. The processing of the meat for the cattle, hogs and lamb come with the sale. The meat is processed and wrapped into retail cuts by Louisiana Tech Meat Science Lab.

“A lot of students find that this is a different type of exposure for them as opposed to a veterinary clinic setting – between the livestock, auction and veterinary setting,” said Morgan.

Green added, “Not only is this a great learning experience for the students, but it brings students, faculty members, staff and sale supporters together for a common cause.”

Include a taste of the tropics in your landscape

By Dan Gill

LSU AgCenter

If you regularly read national gardening magazines or get a variety of gardening catalogs, you may have noticed that tropical-look landscaping is a trend that is gaining attention across the country. To Louisiana gardeners, this hot concept is old hat. We’ve been gardening in the tropical style as long as anyone can remember. But there is almost always room to try one more plant, and many great tropicals are out there for you to purchase and plant in your garden now.

In addition to their amazing heat tolerance and outstanding summer performance, we grow tropical plants for a variety of reasons. Some plants, such as hibiscus, ixora, canna, angel trumpet, bird-of-paradise and butterfly ginger, are grown for their beautiful, and often fragrant, flowers. Others, such as peacock ginger, caladium, elephant ear and copper leaf plant, are grown for their attractive, colorful foliage. The best tropicals are those that reliably survive winters where you garden. Despite their tropical origins, many are hardy throughout Louisiana if given some winter protection.

Gardeners who are working with shady areas will find a gold mine of shade-tolerant plants among the gingers. In their natural habitats, most gingers grow under the canopies of trees in filtered light, although some grow in the open at the edge of water and in sunnier conditions. Generally, gingers will do best where they receive direct sun for about two to four hours a day and should not be planted in hot, sunny, dry locations. Shell ginger and some types of Curcuma and Costus will, however, grow in full sun.

Many different gingers can fill a variety of gardening needs. Low-growing gingers, like peacock ginger and smaller species of Curcuma or Globba, make great ground covers or clumps at the front of shady borders. Medium-sized gingers 3 to 6 feet tall include species and cultivars of Curcuma, Hedychium and Costus, while the shell ginger grows 10 to 12 feet tall. These larger gingers are excellent choices for accents, screens or the back of a border.

No other summer-flowering shrub surpasses the tropical hibiscus (Hibiscus rosa-sinensis) for glossy, dark green foliage and nonstop flowers in shades and blends of pink, yellow, orange, white, lavender or scarlet. The long blooming season runs from late spring through November or later.

The tropical hibiscus thrives in sunny locations and looks great in beds or containers. It is one of the more tender tropicals and will not reliably survive temperatures below the mid-20s. Still, they are readily available and not too expensive, so it’s easy enough to replace any lost to winter freezes. If grown in containers, you can move them to safety on cold winter nights.

We grow a number of species of clerodendrum for their beautiful, fragrant flowers and, in some cases, ornamental fruit. They may freeze back during especially cold winters but reliably return from their roots.

Perhaps the most well-known is the cashmere bouquet (Clerodendrum bungei). Effortlessly easy to grow in part shade, cashmere bouquet produces 4-to-5-foot-tall stalks with large clusters of small, fragrant, mauve flowers. But it spreads rapidly.

Many of the clerodendrums produce stems that run underground and produce plants some distance from the original plant, but none are quite as bad as cashmere bouquet. If you are aware of this habit and promptly remove sprouts from areas where you don’t want them, this is not a problem. But if you are the type of gardener who isn’t inclined to keep a careful eye out and remove them as necessary, you probably shouldn’t plant those that spread rapidly.

One of the best clerodendrums is the harlequin glory bower (Clerodendrum trichotomum). This large shrub to small tree looks as tropical as the rest, but in fact it is quite hardy. It drops its leaves in winter but doesn’t freeze back. Starting in June or July, large clusters of very fragrant white flowers last until August. Then amazing turquoise fruit continues the display. It spreads rapidly.

Brugmansias are large-growing, tree-like plants often reaching heights of 10 feet or more if winters are mild. The large leaves are generally about 8 to 12 inches long and are covered with fine hairs. They are easily grown in a moist, fertile, well-drained soil in full sun to part shade.

The common name for Brugmansia is angel’s trumpets. The trumpet-shaped flowers are large – about 9 inches long flaring to about 6 inches across – and may be white, yellow, pink or peach. A tree in full bloom

scent floats in the air like expensive perfume with light lemony overtones. To stick your nose right in a flower and take a whiff is almost intoxicating.

Including tropicals in the landscape has many rewards, but you do need to be prepared to protect them when and if necessary during winter. And you’ll occasionally lose tropicals during unusually cold winters. When they perform like troopers with beautiful flowers and foliage through the hottest part of the summer, however, many gardeners consider it well worth the effort.
