These Gator Boots are made for Walkin'...

By Veronica Mosgrove

Tucked away on a street less traveled on Hwy. 1064 in Tickfaw is a boot store, but not like anything you would expect. In fact, if you blink you would miss it.

"We started out as an alligator farm," said owner Michael R. Ragusa. "We sold it last year to a larger farm in the area."

The gator farm was started in 1991 to sell the skins. By 1995, the Ragusa's and their business Circle

M Ranch were in the boot making business.

"Eighty percent of our business was selling raw skins to tanneries in Italy and France for the European watch strap market and for designers such as Gucci and Hermes. The rest of the skins we use to make boots, shoes, belts, purses and all kinds of accessories," said Ragusa.

Ragusa says Circle M Ranch is the only company in the area that tans the skins then make the boots and other products to the extent they do. "You can't go to a retail store and find the variety of skins and sizes we have available like you can here."

Ragusa, who works with his youngest daughter, Micah Ragusa Bujol, says they've never been a traditional boot store but can make just about anything. "We have boots in stock but we also do special orders."

Bujol says that they started out going to trade shows and quickly learned the alligator skins were some of the most sought after. "For people, they feel like it makes a statement. It's beautiful and in a class by itself," said Bujol. She added, "People come in and they can never decide what color to get. I always suggest starting with a basic black or brown for the first pair. Those are basic colors that you know you will get the most wear."

Circle M Ranch has done little advertising over the years. They operated mostly through the original Louisiana Sportsman show and wholesale trade shows. Their business is also mostly word of mouth. "Our customers today are customers we've had for many, many years," said Ragusa.

Over the past eight to 10 years, Circle M Ranch has felt competition from stores that sell caiman crocodile from South America which is much less expensive than American alligator and in Ragusa's opinion, an inferior exotic that floods today's market. Ragusa recommends that you make sure to request American alligator if that is indeed what you want because you may be getting caiman crocodile.

Ragusa says approximately 400-500,000 skins are processed each year in Louisiana but says the majority of those skins go to Europe.

Ragusa adds that reality television shows that feature such wildlife

While the store isn't flashy, celebrities are familiar with Circle M Ranch alligator skins. "Actor Arnold Schwarzenegger visited the store in 2012. He was filming a movie here in Louisiana and heard about us. He came in and bought skins for both boots and other costume projects," said Ragusa. "Sylvester Stallone has also done business with us."

Even Saints coach Sean Payton is the proud owner of a pair of Circle M Ranch alligator boots. He got his pair in 2008 prior to the New Orleans Saints winning the Super Bowl. "Only problem is, they sit on his bookshelf on display because he says they're just too pretty to wear," laughed Bujol.

On average, a pair of boots costs between $1,000 and $1,500 retail. Circle M Ranch sells their boots wholesale. Prices increase depending on whether the boots are already in stock or need to be specially made. They add that while the hornback is the more popular skin, the belly of the gator is considered more high end and gives a dressier look.

Besides the store in Tickfaw, Circle M Ranch boots are also available at Adobe in Gonzales, La., Trail's West in Nashville, Tn. And Wild Bill's in Dallas, Tx.

have made the meat more popular than ever. "We sell the meat to most all Don's Seafood Restaurants in the state of Louisiana. The alligator industry in general is benefitting from those types of shows."

Louisiana Agriculture & Forestry Today

Strain urges livestock producers to enroll in disaster assistance program

Baton Rouge, LA (September 5, 2014) - Livestock producers who experienced disaster-related losses since October 2011 are encouraged to apply for assistance by Sept. 30, 2014.

"We urge these producers to contact their local Farm Service Agency (FSA) office as soon as possible to check if they are eligible for assistance, if needed," said

Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M.

If eligible, assistance must be secured by Sept. 30 as congressionally mandated payment reductions will take place for producers who have not acted before that date.

Producers are encouraged to register, request an appointment or begin a Livestock Forage Disaster Program application with their county FSA office before Oct. 1, 2014 to lock in the current zero percent sequestration rate.

As an additional aid to qualified producers applying for LFP, the Farm Service's Agency has developed an online registration that enables farmers and ranchers to put their names on an electronic list before the deadline to avoid reductions in their disaster assistance. This is an alternative to visiting or contacting the county office. To place a name on the Livestock Forage Disaster Program list online, visit <http://www.fsa.usda.gov/disaster-register>.

A BRAND IS A COW'S ONLY RETURN ADDRESS

The deadline to register your brand for the next five year period passed on September 1, 2014. However, applications for brand renewals have been extended to Dec. 31, 2014. If the owner fails to renew the brand, it will be forfeited on the last day of the year and may thereafter be issued to another applicant.

The Livestock Brand Commissioner mailed out renewal notices to all brand owners to remind them of this. The fee for the next five years is $10.00. The fee must be mailed in to avoid delays in processing your renewal.

If you did not receive your renewal notice, please contact our office or mail in the $10.00 fee along with your certificate number, description of brand and the name the brand is registered in. Also, please note any changes in your mailing address.

Here's a new insect to watch out for

LSU AgCenter Report

HAMMOND, La. – Louisiana homeowners should be on the alert for a small insect called chilli thrips that feeds on the young, tender parts of many plants, according to Yan Chen, an entomologist at the LSU AgCenter Hammond Research Station.

A pest of tropical and subtropical regions of the world, chilli thrips first made an appearance in Louisiana on Knock Out roses in New Orleans in 2009.

They're most obvious and prolific on roses, said LSU AgCenter horticulturist Allen Owings. They're also common on camellias, plumbago and Indian hawthorne as well as other ornamental plants.

Populations can be high in September and October as temperatures cool off somewhat, Owings said. "They're typically seen affecting new growth where plants were pruned in late August and early September or are having their fall growth flush."

Unlike other thrips species that are flower feeders, chilli thrips feed on foliage and other plant tissue, Chen said. Feeding causes leaf, bud and fruit bronzing, and damaged leaves curl, become distorted and fall from the plants.

On infested plants, the new growth becomes stunted or dwarfed and appears deformed. Damaged buds become brittle and drop.

"Chilli thrips prefer to feed on young plant material, but all plant foliage above ground is susceptible," Chen said.

The adult female lays eggs into the plant tissue along leaf veins, terminal plant parts and buds. New thrips hatch in six to eight days under normal temperatures or slightly longer in cooler temperatures.

In the first two lifecycle stages, they actively feed on young, tender plant parts, Chen said.

Chilli thrips are quite small – about 1/25 to 1/8 of an inch long. Nymphs are pale yellow and highly active while adults are pale yellow with dark wings and jump when they're disturbed.

If you suspect chilli thrips, the best way to identify them is to place a sheet of white paper beneath the leaves or flowers and shake the plant. The thrips will fall onto the paper.

Managing infestations is easier if populations are detected early before they cause severe damage, Chen said. For homeowners, treatment can be done with three materials that are available and very functional.

Acephate (Orthene), imidacloprid and spinosad are the best controls. All can be applied as foliar sprays, and imidacloprid can be used as a drench.

Chilli thrips are moved through infested plant material. Populations have been found in retail outlets and on berries in grocery stores, Chen said. The adults are poor fliers, but they can be found on over 250 ornamentals, vegetables and fruits. More information is available online at www.lsuagcenter.com/hammond.

Louisiana Century Farm Program seeking applicants

The Louisiana Century Farm Program is preparing to recognize and honor Louisiana's farmers, ranchers and forestry landowners who have owned family farm land for 100 years or more.

"This is an opportunity to have your family farm recognized for the many years it has contributed to the agricultural industry in the state of Louisiana," said Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M.

To be eligible for the program, one must be able to answer yes to each of these questions:

Has the farm been in your family continuously for at least 100 years?

Does the farm have at least 10 acres of the original founder's land?

Is at least one owner a resident of Louisiana?

Does the farm produce at least

$1,000 in farming income annually?

Tree farms have different requirements.

Applications are currently being accepted through December 31, 2014.

"This is an opportunity to document your families' agricultural legacy in the area in which you live," added Strain.

There is no cost to apply. Applications may be found online at www.lsuagcenter.com/CenturyFarms or for more information, contact the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry's Lillie Adams Wiley at (318) 949-3225, ladams@ldaf.la.gov or 740 Covington Rd., Haughton, La. 71037.

This program is sponsored by the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry, LSU AgCenter, Louisiana Farm Bureau and Louisiana Land Bank.

Horse owners should check hay for toxic blister beetles

By Olivia McClure
LSU AgCenter

BATON ROUGE, La. – Louisiana horse owners need to inspect alfalfa hay bales for blister beetles, which are tiny, toxic and potentially fatal, said LSU AgCenter equine specialist Neely Walker.

The LSU School of Veterinary Medicine recently treated a case of blister beetle toxicity, Walker said. As few as 25 ingested beetles can be toxic to an average-sized horse, and poisoned animals can die within 72 hours, she said.

Blister beetles are members of a family of plant-feeding insects that contain cantharidin, a toxic chemical that protects the beetles from predators. They have narrow bodies that are 3/4 to 1 1/4 inches long, broad heads and antennae that are about one-third of their body length.

Color of blister beetles ranges from solid ash gray and black to black with light margins and striped. Walker said striped blister beetles have the highest cantharidin content and tend to congregate in large clusters along field margins, which can result in a greater number of beetles in a section of hay.

Hay crimpers, which crush hay so it dries faster and evenly, kill the beetles, but they are still toxic after they die, Walker said. Dead beetles remain in hay once it is baled.

The severity of the reaction ranges from temporary poisoning to reduced digestive ability to death, but depends on the overall health of the horse and how much cantharidin was ingested. Still, if horse owners suspect blister beetle poisoning, they should contact a veterinarian immediately.

"Symptoms typically appear within hours of ingestion and include inflammation of the digestive and urinary tract, colic and straining during increased urination," Walker said. "Secondary infection may occur, causing kidney failure, increased heart rate and respiration, dehydration, sweating, diarrhea and decreased calcium levels, which can damage the heart."

Animals that recover from poisoning may develop laminitis or other systemic infections, Walker said.

Buying hay from local producers is one way to reduce chances of getting hay that contains blister beetles.

"Develop a relationship with your hay producer and be aware of their production practices," Walker said. "Also look for first-cutting hay, when blister beetles are not active, and hay that is harvested at the late bud stage or when the first flowers open."

Even if hay is purchased from a reputable local producer, Walker said, it is still important to check hay for blister beetles before feeding it to horses.
