3rd Grade Bonnie Plants Cabbage Program winner

Sara Brooks

Nine-year-old Sara Brooks knew just what she needed to do to grow the winning cabbage for the Bonnie Plants 3rd Grade Cabbage Program. “I talked to it!,” said Sara. But that’s not all she did.

Sara’s family has a family garden where they grow tomatoes, cucumbers, squash and zucchini every spring. When Sara got her tiny cabbage plant from her teacher at St. John Elementary in Lake Charles, she and her parents took the competition very seriously. “We cleaned out our garden box, tilled the dirt and started out fresh so Sara could plant her cabbage,” said Sara’s mom, Shelly.

Sara’s cabbage grew to a whopping 26 pounds! Shelly said she and her husband, James, knew this was a great learning experience for Sara and the possibility of winning a $1,000 prize to go toward her education was even more exciting. “She’s our little helper. We don’t ever have to push her to follow through on anything,” added Shelly.

Every day, Sara would check on her cabbage. She would water it, add fertilizer (which included chicken poop) when needed, and cover it during inclement weather.

“When it would get cold, I’d take a sheet, cover my cabbage and place rocks on the edges of the sheet so it would not blow away,” said Sara.

Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., was on hand when Bonnie Plants presented Sara with her award. “This is an example how from a small plant you can grow so much food. Then you cook it and share it. Your food comes from plants, animals and the Earth,” he told Sara and her classmates.

Sara’s grandmother, Joyce Anderson, who grew up on a farm, said she told Sara when you’re responsible for something and you take care of it, you reap the benefits.

“It’s also possible to win at something when you’re doing what you’re supposed to and taking care of – in this case – a cabbage.”

Sara’s grandmother took half of the giant sized cabbage with her to Texas where she visited family. She cooked the cabbage and said it was delicious!

“I typically eat cabbage on New Year’s Day,” added Sara. She’s still surprised she was the winner out of tens of thousands of third graders who participated in the project. “I really had fun with this. I’d go outside and talk to it. I even did cheers in front of it!”

For the past 13 years, Louisiana schools have participated in the Bonnie Plants Cabbage Program. This year, 53,731 third graders received cabbage plants to take home, nurture and grow. “This is a great way to get kids involved in gardening and agriculture in general. These kids take the responsibility of caring for the plant every day very seriously,” added Foster Reeves, a Bonnie Plants representative.

Sara’s parents said her $1,000 winnings are already in a savings bond to go toward her education.

St. John Elementary which goes from pre-k through 5th grades recently received a grant for a “teaching garden”. Starting in the spring, each grade will be responsible for growing a vegetable.

USDA Detects Avian Influenza in Indiana – Commissioner Strain urges poultry owners to maintain biosecurity

Baton Rouge, La. (January 15, 2016) – Louisiana Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., said the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s (USDA) Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) confirmed the presence of highly pathogenic H7N8 avian influenza (HPAI) in a commercial turkey flock in Dubois County, Indiana.

Federal officials said the Indiana case is a different strain of HPAI than the strains that caused the 2015 outbreak. They added that there are no known cases of H7N8 infections in humans.

Avian influenza does not present a food safety risk; poultry and eggs are safe to eat. The Centers for Disease Control considers the risk of illness to humans to be very low.

“This new case of HPAI in Indiana should serve as reminder to all Louisiana poultry producers that while we haven’t had any cases of the disease in our state the threat remains. I’m urging all poultry owners to be vigilant with biosecurity protocols in order to protect our valuable poultry industry,” Strain said.

Anyone involved with poultry production, from the small backyard to the large commercial producer, should review their biosecurity activities to assure the health of their birds. To facilitate such a review, a biosecurity self-assessment and educational materials can be found at http://www.uspoultry.org/animal_husbandry/intro.cfm

In addition to practicing good biosecurity, all bird owners should prevent contact between their birds and wild birds and report sick birds or unusual bird deaths to state/federal officials, either through your state veterinarian at 225-925-3980, the LDAF toll-free Hotline at 1-866-927-2476 or through USDA’s toll-free number at 1-866-536-7593. Quarterly Report of Forest Products July-Sept., 2015

Prices reflect total volume and total value ratios paid from bid and negotiated sales. Values do not represent inter- or intra-company transactions and long-term contracts. The purpose of the report is (1) to provide a guide for private timber owners in determining stumpage prices regionally or statewide, (2) establish annual stumpage price figures for severance tax purposes and (3) determine the timber value for use-value assessment of forest land.

*Insufficient number of quotes to report (less than three quotes received).
 Note: The Doyle Log Scale is the basis for board foot measurement.

This report is intended to serve only as a guide for timber stumpage prices and to monitor market trends. It should not be used to determine the fair market value of a specific timber sale. The prices paid for a specific stand of timber will vary considerably due to factors such as size, species, quality, quantity, logging conditions, distance to the mill, end product, demand and competition. Timber markets often change rapidly and therefore prices in this report are not necessarily a reflection of current market prices. It is strongly recommended to obtain assistance from professional foresters and use the competitive bidding process as the ultimate determinant of fair market value for any specific tract of timber.

Black rot, which causes black lesions that make the sweet potato taste bitter, became a major problem in North Carolina in 2014. The disease has not been a problem for 40 to 50 years in Louisiana and has not yet resurfaced here, Clark said.

It is much easier to avoid black rot than to fix the problem, Clark said. Some of the best defenses include using disease-free seed and keeping packing lines clean.

It is important for growers to test their soil so they can optimize fertilizer applications, AgCenter agronomist Arthur Villordon said.

"If you put too much of a certain nutrient, it creates limitations for other nutrients," he said. For example, excessive nitrogen can cause vines to grow too rapidly and result in a higher percent of decay in roots during storage.

Villordon is also studying ways to reduce erosion, including the use of prohexadione calcium, which creates a coating over the soil and helps beds retain their shape.

Two new herbicide technologies – the Enlist Weed Control System and Roundup Ready Xtend – expected to hit the market this year could help row crop farmers control resistant weeds. But they must apply those herbicides carefully, especially in fields near sweet potatoes, said AgCenter weed scientist Donnie Miller.

As little as one-tenth of an application rate of the herbicides – an amount comparable to what's left behind if sprayer tanks aren't cleaned properly – can harm sweet potato yields, Miller said.

"If you grow multiple crops and use the same sprayer, it is imperative to follow all the cleanout procedures," he said.

The U.S. Environmental Protection Agency has updated its standards that protect farm workers, pesticide handlers and others during pesticide application, said Bruce Garner, AgCenter agent in West Carroll Parish. One requires farm employers to inform workers about potential exposure to pesticides and mitigate exposure. They must also offer EPA-approved pesticide training every year and keep records of the training.

To help minimize sprayer drift, applicators should follow label directions closely and identify sensitive areas, such as susceptible crops, bodies of water and wetlands, Garner said. They should also consider weather conditions before making applications.

Sweet potatoes are exempt from a rule that requires produce growers to take more steps to prevent contamination, but processing facilities must comply with another rule that is part of the Food Safety Modernization Act (FSMA), said AgCenter food safety specialist Achyut Adhikari. Those facilities must make an effort to reduce contamination and document their practices.

Many Louisiana sweet potato growers participate in a certification program called Good Agricultural Practices (GAPs) and already meet the similar FSMA standards, which give buyers the assurance that their produce is safe, Adhikari said.

The AgCenter's sweet potato production budget publication has been updated for 2016 and is available online, said AgCenter economist Kurt Guidry. The budget includes projected per-acre costs and returns for mother beds and three harvest strategies. It can be found by going to www.lsuagcenter.com and searching for "sweet potato budget."

Also at the meeting, the Louisiana Sweet Potato Association presented Distinguished Service Awards to Tad Hardy of the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry, and to Villordon.

19 graduate La. Master Farmer Program

LSU AgCenter Report

LAFAYETTE, La. – The newest graduates of the Louisiana Master Farmer Program were honored Jan. 12 during the annual convention of the Louisiana Association of Conservation Districts.

Nineteen graduates of the program were recognized, along with 24 previous graduates who were recertified.

Also, Scott and Angie Tyler, of Lincoln Parish, received the Outstanding Master Farmer Award.

Rogers Leonard, LSU AgCenter associate vice president, said participating in the Louisiana Master Farmer Program is “a welcome opportunity to do the right thing.”

The Master Farmer program is a cooperative effort among the LSU AgCenter, the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry, the Louisiana Farm Bureau, the Louisiana Cattlemen’s Association and the U.S. Department of Agriculture’s Natural Resources Conservation Service. “There’s no way any of these single entities could put a program like this in place,” Leonard said.

Scott and Angie Tyler have a long list of accomplishments that were considered in their selection as Outstanding Master Farmer, Leonard said. They were certified in 2010, and they have a broiler and cattle operation.

Using several conservation measures, such as drop pipes and filter beds, the Tylers have met the challenges posed by the hilly terrain on their farm with a nutrient management plan.

They also have converted discarded cooking oil into fuel for 14 years.

The couple has traveled to Washington, D.C., to advocate for agricultural interests, meeting with Gina McCarthy, administrator for the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, and Krysta Harden, deputy secretary of the U.S. Department of Agriculture.

James Hendrix, Louisiana Master Farmer area agent in north Louisiana, said the Tylers have become role models for agriculture. “Angie and Scott are producers that represent the future of agricultural sustainability,” he said.

The couple demonstrates the effectiveness of conservation practices. “They further the mission of the Louisiana Master Farmer Program by outreach and by showcasing the benefits of best management practices to other producers,” Hendrix said.

Ernest Girouard, Louisiana Master Farmer Program coordinator, said several environmental issues affecting agricultural producers have risen to the national level, increasing interest in the Master Farmer program. “We can be at the forefront in addressing those issues,” he said.

Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain said conservation measures in the Master Farmer program are essential to protecting natural resources.

“Conservation is the key,” Strain said. “Without conservation, without sustainability, we will not have productivity or profitability.”

Graduates obtaining certification were Cindy Beard, of Webster Parish; Jason Benoit, Charles Bruchhaus, Ross Bruchhaus and Kyle Fontenot, all of Jefferson Davis Parish; Ralph Buford, Royce Buford and Charles Schultz Jr., all of Calcasieu Parish; Renee Cottrell, of Webster Parish; Randell Fletcher, of Grant Parish; Dana Frey, Gerard Frey and Dale Thibodeaux, all of Acadia Parish; Mary Hardwick, of Tensas Parish; Brad Judice and Ray Judice, both of Iberia Parish; Kelly Precht, of Cameron Parish; Wesley Volentine, of Caddo Parish, and Lesley Tom Walker, of Natchitoches Parish.

Those who were recertified are Glenn Austin, of Winn Parish; Dennis Courtright and Paula Courtright, both of Grant Parish; Jess Crosier, C.J. Durand, Daniel Durand, Greg Durand, Edgar Durand and Jeff Durand, all of St. Martin Parish; Martin Frey, Wesley Jones, J.A. Rummmler and Jens Rummmler, all of Pointe Coupee Parish; Harvey Gonsoulin, of Iberia Parish; Jay Hardwick, of Tensas Parish; John Lance Harris and Clay Robertson, both of Rapides Parish; Kevin Landry, Kent Lounsbury, George Sagrera, Mark Sagrera and Allen Schriefer, all of Vermilion Parish; Dezere Richard, of Calcasieu Parish; and Dana Shuff of Grant Parish.

The next Louisiana Master Farmer class will be held April 6 for phases I and II at the LSU AgCenter Dean Lee Research Station at LSU of Alexandria. For more information, contact Donna Morgan at 318-613-9278.

LSU AgCenter research highlighted at sweet potato meeting

OAK GROVE, La. – Although the 2015 sweet potato season was marked by difficult weather conditions – excessive rains that delayed planting followed by a hot and dry summer, then more rain that interfered with harvest – Louisiana growers still ended up with a good crop, LSU AgCenter experts said at a Louisiana Sweet Potato Association meeting on Jan. 12.

Farmers harvested an average of 450 bushels per acre this fall, down only slightly from 2014’s average yield of 480 bushels per acre, said AgCenter extension associate Myrl Sistrunk. Statewide acreage increased to more than 9,300 acres in 2015, the majority of which was planted in the popular AgCenter-developed Beauregard variety.

Sweet potatoes have a $110 million yearly impact on Louisiana’s economy, Sistrunk said. West Carroll Parish is the No. 1 sweet potato-growing parish with about 3,780 acres.

The Orleans variety is still gaining popularity in Louisiana, said Don La Bonte, AgCenter sweet potato breeder. It is similar to the Beauregard variety but has a more consistent shape and higher yields.

The high-yielding Bayou Belle variety, copper-skinned Bellevue and sweet, dark red-skinned Burgundy also have good potential, La Bonte said. They are resistant to some key diseases and fill niches in the market.

Several AgCenter scientists gave updates on their work to help growers control pests and make better management decisions.

AgCenter entomologist Julien Beuzelin said he saw significant cucumber beetle damage in sweet potatoes this past season. A combination of the Lorsban, Admire and Belay insecticides provides good control of the beetles, Beuzelin said.

Resistant varieties also help prevent insect damage, he said. In one study, cucumber beetles damaged nearly all Beauregard potatoes, but only 75 percent of the white-fleshed Murasaki variety saw damage.

Jie Chen, an LSU graduate student in entomology, talked about her studies on the sweet potato weevil. The weevils prefer laying eggs on Beauregard potatoes over Evangeline and Murasaki, and their presence can lead to an increase of other insects, such as the green peach aphid.

The Telone and Velum nematicides, whether used alone or together, make a significant difference in yields for fields affected by nematodes, said Tara Smith, director of the AgCenter Sweet Potato Research Station.

The AgCenter Foundation Seed Program recently joined the National Clean Plant Network, Smith said, which has brought in new funding that the station is using to improve its greenhouses.

Some old diseases are reappearing in sweet potatoes, including scurf and black rot, said AgCenter plant pathologist Chris Clark. Both are seedborne diseases that can survive for up to three years in the soil.
