Coffee farmers Machappa and Devaki Koothanda visited their daughter, Yashica, husband, Marc and infant daughter, Mary, in Baton Rouge recently.

Indian coffee farmers with Louisiana ties

By Veronica Mosgrove

When Machappa and Devaki Koothanda visit their daughter, Yashica, in Louisiana, they love to drink coffee together. Coffee is big business where they come from and they certainly know coffee.

The Koothanda's are coffee bean farmers from Coorg, a district in the southern part of India.

"Indian coffee is strong but very smooth. We add a lot of chicory when we grind it," said Machappa.

Coorg is described as having a wet, cloudy climate where they also grow rice and spices. Coorg is also known for its honey.

"We've farmed for generations. We pick the beans, dry, bag and sell them mostly to local vendors, the European market and coffee buyers who sell to big companies," said Machappa.

According to the Koothanda's, a typical day starts at eight o'clock in the morning. Approximately 10 people work on their farm. Children must attend school through the tenth grade but can start working at the age of 18.

"After we pick the beans, we dry them on the concrete patio. We constantly rotate the beans as they dry. At the end of the day, we cover them and start the process over the next day," said Machappa.

The coffee trees are trimmed to about 3.5 feet in height making it very easy to pick the beans by hand.

In India, coffee picking season is November to January for Arabica and January through April for Robusta which are common coffee beans known all over the world.

The Koothanda's say the majority of people in Coorg are coffee farmers, making it their primary source of income. They say they have some of the same concerns that farmers in America have pertaining to family farms. "Our son will eventually take over our farm, but we are seeing more and more young people pursue other careers," said Machappa.

While the trees are sturdy, picking coffee beans is a delicate procedure. Farmers must take care of each plant and pay attention to pests and diseases. They use irrigation systems and constantly prune their trees so they are not completely shaded.

Machappa says they now use tillers for their 20 acres of land. At one time, water buffalo were used to till the land. Other than that, everything they do is done manually. Each worker makes about $5 per day.

The Koothanda's spent four months visiting their daughter, son-in-law and granddaughter in Louisiana. They planned their trip during the rainy season in India, but they say it's now time to get back to the farm that family members and employees tended to while they were gone. And while they enjoyed trying coffee sold in the United States, they certainly missed the local flavor of the coffee beans they grow in India.

Currently, Indian grown coffee is not sold in the United States.

More citrus canker detected in La.

Baton Rouge, La. (Oct. 5, 2016) – Citrus Canker was recently detected throughout Plaquemines Parish and two locations in St. John the Baptist Parish by the USDA Animal Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS). Since multiple locations of the citrus disease were identified, all of Plaquemines Parish is pending federal and state quarantine for both citrus nursery stock and fruit.

Federal and state quarantines restrict the movement of regulated articles such as citrus trees and fruit out of the quarantined area.

Citrus Canker is a bacterial disease of citrus trees which was first identified in June of 2013 at City Park in New Orleans.

Citrus trees located within in the quarantined area which are to be sold outside of the quarantine, must be grown in a USDA APHIS approved structure. If citrus trees are not grown in a USDA APHIS approved structure, then those trees may only be sold within the quarantined area.

The current citrus canker quarantined areas include: parishes of St. Bernard and Orleans, and portions of Jefferson, Lafourche, St. Charles, and Plaquemines. In addition to the Plaquemines Parish finds, the recent finds in St. John the Baptist Parish have initiated a survey of the parish by the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry and the USDA. Once the survey is completed, regulatory action will be taken in St. John the Baptist Parish.

Citrus fruit growers may sell fruit within the quarantined area, but may not move fruit outside of the quarantined area unless the fruit is treated with a USDA approved chemical treatment.

The disease is spread by wind driven rain and causes lesions on the leaves, stems and fruit. The fruit is still edible and is not harmful to humans.

If you believe your citrus trees have citrus canker, contact the LDAF Horticulture and Quarantine Programs office at 225-952-8100 or the USDA at 225-298-5410. For more information on citrus canker, contact LSU AgCenter Plant Pathologist Raj Singh at 225-578-4562 or rsingh@agcenter.lsu.edu. For a citrus canker factsheet, visit www.LSUAgCenter.com.

Ag Expo is sponsored each year by the North Louisiana Agri-Business Council, with extensive cooperation from LSU AgCenter, LA Tech University, LA Cattlemen's Association and Monsanto. Additional information, including exhibitor applications and event schedules, can be found at www.agexpo.org or call 318.355.2495.

Fresh produce farmers, packers, distribution centers

The Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry is able to provide fresh produce farmers, packing facilities and distribution centers in Louisiana with basic Good Agriculture Practice/Good Handling Practices (GAP/GHP) audits, as well as, GAPs Harmonized audits (with or without the Global addendum).

GAP audits are a voluntary for hire service that certifies a producer's efforts to provide safe, quality product free from contamination to the consumer.

For more information or to schedule an audit, contact Audrey Carrier at our Hammond office at 985-543-4024 or email acarrier@ldaf.state.la.us.

Louisiana signs agricultural MOU with Cuba

Baton Rouge, La. (October 10, 2016) – A Memorandum of Understanding (MOU) to conduct trade of agricultural products was signed by Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M. and Cuban agricultural officials last week. During the week of October 3-7, 2016, Strain participated in a trade mission with Governor John Bel Edwards, Louisiana Economic Development and port officials.

“When our agricultural delegation first visited Cuba in July, we began what we hope will be a productive relationship in which Louisiana farmers will greatly benefit once the embargo is lifted. We have some of the best agricultural products and logistically, it makes more sense for the Cubans to trade with us,” said Strain. “We want to ensure we are on the same playing field as everyone else once trade restrictions are relaxed.”

Cuba imports 80 percent of its food at approximately $2 billion annually. The island nation imports most of its rice from Vietnam. Cubans reportedly consume the most rice in the western hemisphere. Cuba needs commodities such as rice, wheat, corn, pork, poultry, beef, soybeans, petroleum and mechanical implements.

One obstacle in doing business with Cuba is third-party financing and issues with credit since Cuba is cash poor.

“Our next step is to push for the passage of the Crawford Amendment so we can have the same trade rules as every other nation,” said Strain.

The Crawford Amendment would permit private credit to facilitate American agricultural exports to Cuba. The Crawford Amendment is currently withdrawn, but could be considered after the presidential election.

Lawns require fall care, too

By Dan Gill
LSU AgCenter Horticulturist

Lawn care definitely changes as the weather begins to cool. By October, the growth of warm-season grasses like St. Augustine, centipede, bermuda and zoysia begins to slow down. As a result, now is not a good time to do anything that would disrupt or damage the turf, such as filling, aerating or dethatching. Although we won't have to mow as often, continue to mow regularly to maintain proper height, and make sure your mower blades are still sharp.

By mid- to late November or December, most warm-season grasses will be completely or partially dormant (St. Augustine may not go completely dormant during mild south Louisiana winters), and this dormancy is important to their ability to survive potentially severe freezes during winter. Applying any fertilizers high in nitrogen (the first number in the three numbers that appear on the package, such as 27-3-3) now stimulates lush fall growth, making the grass more susceptible to cold injury this winter and in the case of St. Augustine grass, attack from the fungus disease called brown patch during mild fall weather.

Lawns may, however, be fertilized with winterizers that contain a high percentage of potassium at this time. The first number in the analysis of these fertilizers, which represents the percentage of nitrogen, should be zero or very small. The third number, which is the percentage of potash in the fertilizer, should be the highest, as in 0-0-20, for instance. You may see winterizers available with substantial amounts of nitrogen in them. Do not purchase and use these. They are not suitable for our area. Unless your soil is very low in potassium, using winterizers is generally optional.

Lawn weed killers may be sprayed on the lawn to control late-summer broadleaf weeds actively growing now. Many suitable formulations are available to kill a wide range of weeds with a single product. Read the label directions carefully, and make sure the product you choose is appropriate to use on the type of lawn grass you have. Because it's too late to fertilize, avoid using weed-and-feed herbicide and fertilizer combinations.

This is also time to do some preventative weed control for cool-season annuals like burweed, chickweed, henbit and annual bluegrass. Preemergence herbicides kill weeds as they germinate and before they emerge from the ground. Therefore, timing this application before weed germination is critical for success. The application of a preemergence herbicide now will kill the germinating weed seeds before they come up. These need to be applied by early October. These herbicides prevent weed growth for several months and usually last through spring. Do not use these materials if you plan to overseed your lawn with rye.

Preemergence herbicides are most effective on small-seeded annuals. Several preemergence herbicides are available to homeowners in easy-to-spread granules and are unlikely to injure established lawns when applied as directed. Look for products like Greenlight Crabgrass Preventer, Hi-Yield Dimension, Scott's Halts and Greenlight Portrait.

Insect and disease problems also occur to lawns this time of year. Brown patch is the disease most common later as the weather cools, especially on St. Augustine. This fungus is generally most active in October, November and even early December in south Louisiana, especially during rainy periods. Areas of affected grass can have a yellowish or orange cast that then turns tan or brown. Spread can be rapid. Fortunately, the grass often recovers in spring, but the disease can also kill the grass. If you decide to treat, fungicides labeled to control lawn diseases are available at your local nursery.

Another pest currently active, especially when hot, dry weather lingers into late September and October, is the chinch bug. These ant-sized insects feed by sucking the sap from the grass, causing it to dry out and die. Look closely at the blades of grass in the affected dead areas and see if they look rolled up lengthwise. Because chinch bugs kill the grass, prompt treatment is important to minimize damage. A variety of lawn insecticides labeled to control chinch bugs are available wherever garden pesticides are sold.

If you are planning to lay new sod, do so as soon as possible. You need to give the newly laid sod time to grow roots and become established before the weather cools off too much.

Rye can be used to overseed existing lawns in October or November to extend the lawn's green color through the winter. Remember that this also extends your lawn mowing. Annual or perennial rye is available, as well as blends containing perennial rye with blue grasses and fescues. Annual rye is most commonly available and is suitable for most situations. Perennial rye and blends produce the higher quality turf, but the seed is more expensive. Both types die when the weather gets hot and must be replanted every year.

As the weather cools and we don't have to mow so often, we will all be happy. But don't let that prevent you from paying attention to other things that your lawn may need over the next few months.
