Kentwood Co-Op

By Veronica Mosgrove

When Hurricane Harvey ravaged Texas in August 2017, it was a group of Louisiana farmers who stepped up and assisted Louisiana volunteers who traveled to Texas to help.

“We learned that the Cajun Navy needed some financial assistance to pay for fuel to operate their boats being used to rescue flood victims,” said Bubba Huckaby who serves as general manager of the Kentwood Co-Op.

An organized group of volunteers who helped rescue flood victims during the “Great Flood” in Louisiana in August 2016 became known as the “Cajun Navy”. Since that time, they have become a more organized volunteer group that uses their own resources. But that is just it. They are a volunteer group so they now rely on donations to help them do what they do.

At the time of Hurricane Harvey, the state of Louisiana did not have a funding source to help this volunteer group. However, the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry knew who to call.

“As a co-op, we have about 2000 members. We’re one of the largest co-ops in the state and we serve about a 100 mile radius. At that time, we had a little extra money. When Commissioner (Mike) Strain’s office called us for assistance, we did not hesitate to help the Cajun Navy pay for their gasoline,” added Huckaby.

The Kentwood Co-Op wound up donating $2500 to the Cajun Navy and $2500 toward fund to help small farmers. That fund was set up by the Texas Department of Agriculture.

“When Hurricane Katrina came through, our area was impacted and neighboring states helped us. It is just in our nature to help. We love organizations that help folks. The Cajun navy is a benefit to areas where there is a lot of water,” added Huckaby. We love organizations that help folks. The Cajun Navy is a benefit to areas where there is a lot of water,” added Huckaby.

The Kentwood co-op also sent feed to farmers in Louisiana that were impacted by Harvey. “Farming is always a tough way to make a living. We never get paid for what we really do. But farming is something that is bred in you. It’s what you know and it’s a passion,” said Huckaby.

Co-ops are instrumental in helping the farming community. They are beneficial to smaller stores in the area that cannot take large loads. They also have the capability to blend feeds. Co-ops are also where farmers can rent equipment to spread seeds and fertilizer.

In particular, the Kentwood co-op offers three feed mills (two conventional and one organic), a fertilizer plant, fertilizer spreader equipment and custom bag feed.

“Farmers don’t have it easy, but when we have a little extra, we want to make sure we help with good causes. And one more thing: Commissioner Strain does so much for the ag economy and he represents the state so well. We appreciate that very much and when his office needed us, we did not hesitate to step up whether it’s for ag or the community at large,” said Huckaby.

Arrest made in St. Landry Parish cattle thefts

Baton Rouge, La. (February 9, 2018) – A Ville Platte man is under arrest in connection with the theft of six cattle valued at $7,500 according to Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M.

Thirty-five year old Dovinski Doucet was arrested February 6, 2018 in St. Landry Parish by Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Livestock Brand Commission inspectors.

On December 5, 2017, the LDAF received a report of the stolen cattle from a farm in the Lawtell Community of St. Landry Parish.

Following an investigation, brand inspectors determined Doucet sold the stolen cattle at a local livestock market.

“We advise livestock owners to use registered brands or official ear tags on their livestock which greatly aids in recovery of stolen livestock as well as tracing livestock diseases,” said Strain.

Doucet was booked into the St. Landry Parish Jail.

If convicted, he could face a penalty, with or without hard labor, for not more than ten years, or may be fined not more than ten thousand dollars, or both.

The investigation is ongoing and additional arrests are expected.

All enforcement personnel are commissioned by Louisiana State Police and have authority in the performance of their duties.

Conference highlights women's role in agriculture

Louisiana has approximately 3,500 farms primarily operated by women. Female farmers, ranchers and women in all fields of the agriculture industry gathered for the Louisiana Women in Agriculture conference on Feb. 22 to 23 in Alexandria.

"This is tailored to the needs of women in agriculture," said Amy Robertson, state public affairs specialist with the Louisiana National Resource Conservation Service and organizer of the conference. "We are creating a network across the state and across agriculture to help women."

Sarah Calhoun, founder of Red Ants Pants, was the morning's keynote speaker. She started her company, which bills itself as women's workwear to fit, function and flatter because she was tired of wearing ill-fitting men's work pants.

Calhoun also started the Red Ants Pants Foundation, which offers grants and provide leadership opportunities mainly to women in rural communities.

"We are helping women build self-reliance while preserving and supporting working family farms and ranches," Calhoun said.

Lynda Danos, the Louisiana Ag in the Classroom coordinator, conducted a breakout session about the Ag in the Classroom program.

Danos said with so many people now generations removed from the family farm, consumers are uneducated about the business of agriculture. The program aims to improve agricultural literacy by adding agriculture lessons into the K-12 curriculum.

"The rise and fall of civilizations can be directly tied to agriculture. You can do a whole history lesson on it," Danos said.

The conference also featured Kimberly Ratcliff, a Texas rancher who quit her job with Bloomberg New York to help keep her parent's ranch in the family.

She encouraged the participants to tell the story of, "what you are farming for." She also said she is working with other producers to keep farms in families.

A career in agriculture is more than a job. It's a way of life that the agriculturalists love," Ratcliff said.

Rachel McKinsey, a physicist, attended the conference because her family recently purchased a tract of land.

"I am here to gain more knowledge about agriculture and see what resources and options are available to us and our property," McKinsey said.

The LSU AgCenter and LSU College of Agriculture sponsored a breakfast for the conference.

"Seventy percent of our students in the College of Agriculture are women," said Bill Richardson, LSU vice president for agriculture and dean of the College of Agriculture. "We fully support engaging women in agriculture and developing strong female leaders in the industry."
