David Bordelon

It's about one o'clock in mid-June in Avoyelles Parish – and blistering hot outside.

David Bordelon sits in the shade of his tree-lined field working on irrigation hose as he talks with Bob Posegay. The irrigation is for the bamboo plants that Bordelon, his kids, grandkids and various helpers are planting by hand, one at a time.

In all, Bordelon planted 2,400 Asper Bamboo plants on six acres. Asper, a type of giant bamboo, grows in clumps and well suited for Louisiana's climate.

Posegay is a Lafayette based consultant for OnlyMoso USA. The parent company, out of Italy, expanded into the United States several years ago. The company partners with farmers to grow giant bamboo that will be used for industrial and commercial purposes. This is the second planting the company has done in Louisiana.

Posegay said bamboo is in high demand across the globe because it is easy to grow, renewable and has many uses including, food, construction material, fiber for clothing and more. What makes it even more appealing, Posegay added, "Nothing touches bamboo. You don't have to use any pesticides at all. The only thing you will have to use is fertilizer, periodically. It is just a good cash crop. Nothing out there compares to it except marijuana but it's not legal."

What led Bordelon to this new bamboo-growing venture? As a telephone communications contractor by trade, Bordelon traveled a lot for work and decided to spend more time at home with his family. Until recently, Bordelon leased the 50 acres adjacent his home to a farmer.

"I've been on the road all my life making a living in the telephone business. It's time to stay home," said Bordelon. "I was looking for something to do instead of leasing the property out to someone else to farm."

Then along came an ad on Craig's List and Bordelon decided to take a leap of faith. "I started checking into it and I liked what I saw," Bordelon said. "I'm a niche person. This was something out of the ordinary."

Posegay will have you believe it was his charm that persuaded Bordelon into growing bamboo. It actually was OnlyMoso's data that caught Bordelon's attention.

OnlyMoso offers several programs but guarantees a minimum price for the shoots and cane, Posegay explained. "The farmer buys the plants. When it is time to harvest, he will then notify us and we will pick up the bamboo. Then we act as the broker and sell it for the farmer," Posegay said.

Bordelon is interested in adding to his bamboo plantation. "I want to plant more and I don't really want to wait three years to harvest so see how I do," Bordelon said. "I'm going to look at the harvest they have in Florida and Italy and if their numbers are good I may go ahead and plant more."

At the end of a long day, surrounded by his kids, their spouses and grandkids, Bordelon seems to have accomplished his goal – more time at home, with family.

Louisiana Agriculture & Forestry Today

USDA Designates natural disaster areas

Baton Rouge, La. (June 20, 2018) –Agricultural producers in Natchitoches and Red River parishes who lost property caused by tornadoes and high winds from April 6 through April 7, 2018 are eligible for U.S. Department of Agriculture’s (USDA) Farm Service Agency (FSA) physical loss loans, said Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M.

According to a news release, FSA is offering these low-interest emergency loans to producers with a qualifying loss in eligible parishes. Approval is limited to applicants who suffered severe physical losses only, including the loss of buildings and livestock.

In addition, producers in nine contiguous parishes may be eligible for programs based on this designation. They are: Bienville, Bossier, Caddo, Desoto, Grant, Rapides, Sabine, Vernon and Winn.

The deadline for producers in designated primary and contiguous parishes to apply for loans for physical losses is Feb. 1, 2019.

Physical loss loans can help producers repair or replace damaged or destroyed physical property essential to the success of the agricultural operation, including livestock losses. Examples of property commonly affected include essential farm buildings, fixtures to real estate, equipment, livestock, perennial crops, fruit and nut bearing trees, and harvested or stored crops and hay.

Strain urged producers who may be eligible to contact their local parish FSA office for further information. Additional information is also available online at <http://offices.usda.gov> or <http://disaster.fsa.usda.gov>.

Free trade agreement generates funds for LSU AgCenter rice research

Funds resulting from the Colombian Free Trade Agreement have paid for long-term improvements at the LSU AgCenter H. Rouse Caffey Rice Research Station as well as funding a $1 million endowed chair for rice research in the LSU AgCenter, said Jackie Loewer, president of the Louisiana Rice Research Board.

Last year, the Colombian funds generated $1.8 million for Louisiana rice research, and the trade agreement allowed U.S. rice to be sold in Colombia duty-free, Loewer said at the annual AgCenter rice field day at the research station on June 20.

Loewer presented a check for $1.5 million from farmer checkoff funds used for rice research to Bill Richardson, LSU vice president for agriculture. Don Groth, resident coordinator of the Rice Research Station, said the checkoff funds paid by farmers is crucial to work conducted at the station.

Speaking to roughly 350 people attending the field day, the regional director of the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency said that the agency has become more user-friendly.

"This is a new day at the EPA," said Anne Idsal, director of EPA Region 6, which includes Louisiana, Texas, Arkansas, Oklahoma and New Mexico. She said reduced time frames can be achieved by eliminating duplication during the review process.

The EPA is focusing on problem-solving, and that requires input. "We need to provide better customer service," she said. "You are our customers."

The EPA is now geared toward working with states to achieve compliance with regulations, and different areas of the country require different solutions. "I don't presume to know the ins and outs of every parish,"

Idsal said.

The EPA has helped make significant environmental improvements, she said. "Over time, we have driven our ozone levels down 25 percent across the country."

Action by the state legislature in the recent special session has prevented cuts to the LSU AgCenter. "We're far from fully funded," Richardson said.

A "64 Strong" campaign is underway to get an agriculture scholarship for a student in each Louisiana parish, and so far 43 scholarships have been secured. "We are committed to getting the best students in the state into agriculture," Richardson said.

The Louisiana Rice Research Board's funding of long-term research projects has paid off, said Rogers Leonard, LSU AgCenter associate vice president. "We have the best research center for rice in the United States," he said.

Land-grant universities such as LSU will be cooperating more in a national effort to release new rice varieties, Leonard said.

During the field tour, AgCenter plant pathologist Don Groth said avoiding fungicide resistance requires following four steps.

First, don't reduce fungicide rates. "If you cut the rates, it's like not taking all your antibiotics," he said.

Second, rotate different fungicides to change the modes of action.

Third, application at the best time is important. Fungicides sprayed too late are less effective on a larger disease population, and that increases resistance possibilities, he said.

Finally, use fungicides only when they are needed, he said.

AgCenter weed scientist Eric Webster said Provisia rice showed injury when it was sprayed with the Provisia herbicide, but that was expected.

The new herbicide Gambit has been effective, but it could delay maturity by one to three days if it is applied after weeds have become established, he said.

The herbicide Loyant has resulted in crop injury, especially when it is applied on dry ground and a crop is already under stress. He said hybrids are showing more injury than varieties.

AgCenter entomologist Blake Wilson said a new seed-treatment product, Fortenza, is showing good results against rice water weevils, but it has not received approval to be used in rice. It is similar to Dermacor, but it is not as effective against stem borers.

Another product, Tenchu, may be a good for stink bug control in rice fields near crawfish ponds.

Wilson also advised farmers about the channel apple snail, an invasive species that has caused problems for some crawfish producers.

Emily Kraus, an entomology graduate student, said she has been studying the use of jasmonic acid as a seed treatment for rice water weevil protection. It is showing effectiveness, but it delays germination and heading.

A study of resistant traits in varieties is being conducted to help breeders develop varieties with insect resistance, she said.

AgCenter rice breeder Adam Famoso said a new line of Provisia, PVL108, could be released in 2020.

A new Clearfield line of a Jasmine-type variety, CLJ01, was released this year, and it has the lowest amount of chalk than any variety.

The medium-grain variety CL272 has been tested favorably by Kellogg, and the next step is a 30-day plant run. "Kellogg will be the big determinant on how well 272 takes off," Famoso said.

Xueyan Sha, a former AgCenter rice breeder now at the University of Arkansas, said the medium-grain variety Titan also is being tested by Kellogg.

AgCenter hybrid rice breeder Jim Oard said a partner is being sought to produce the AgCenter hybrid LAH169, released this year. Seed for commercial production could be available in two to three years.

The hybrid has yield potential equal to the most popular commercial hybrids grown in Louisiana. Also, LAH169 has lower grain chalk than commercial hybrids grown in the state, he said.

Hybrid lines with the Clearfield and Provisia traits also are in development.

AgCenter rice specialist Dustin Harrell said his work has included new technology such as furrow irrigation rice used in northeast Louisiana. The system requires the disease resistance of a hybrid, and weed control is a challenge. But, he said, the biggest hurdle is nitrogen fertilizer management.

Harrell also said his project is using drones carrying sensors to determine midseason nitrogen needs.

Jimmy Flanagan, LSU AgCenter agent in St. Mary Parish, said fixed-wing drones can cover more area, but battery time is a limiting factor. And AgCenter agricultural engineer Randy Price said drones are ideal for areas that present challenges for aerial pesticide applications.
