Members of the 2018 class of Louisiana Master Farmers received certificates during the annual Louisiana Association of Conservation Districts meeting at the Crowne Plaza hotel in Baton Rouge. To qualify, they had to attend educational sessions about research-based conservation strategies and write plans for implementing such practices on their farms.

“It’s very important that everyone understands that these producers are doing everything they can to conserve our natural resources, not only to improve their profitability but also to improve the environment and to leave their farms in good condition for future generations,” said Ronnie Levy, coordinator of the Louisiana Master Farmer Program. “They understand that we will need good farmers, conservation practices and information to produce our food and fiber for the future.”

Since the program began in 2001, 251 people have earned the Master Farmer designation. Their training is led by AgCenter experts as well as those from the Louisiana Farm Bureau, the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry, the Louisiana Cattlemen’s Association and the U.S. Department of Agriculture Natural Resources Conservation Service.

“This program operates because we all work together as a team,” LSU Vice President for Agriculture Bill Richardson said during the ceremony.

The newest Master Farmers are Patrick Dwayne David, of Lafayette Parish; Jon Marshall Hardwick, of Tensas Parish; William Mead Hardwick, of Tensas Parish; Joan Lester, of Beauregard Parish; Tom R. Lester, of Beauregard Parish; Kenneth Primeaux Jr.,

of Vermilion Parish; Kenneth Primeaux Sr., of Vermilion Parish; William Glen Ragsdale, of Tensas Parish; Julie Richard, of Vermilion Parish; Beverly Thoman, of Natchitoches Parish; David Thoman, of Natchitoches Parish; Kevin Volentine, of Caddo Parish; and Patty A. Vogt, of Plaquemines Parish.

Also recognized were 23 previous graduates of the program who have completed continuing education hours — a requirement to maintain the Master Farmer certification.

They are Jo Ann Calais, of Lafayette Parish; Dwayne Compton, of Jefferson Davis Parish; Paula Courtright, of Grant Parish; Bryan L. Fontenot, of Jefferson Davis Parish; Neal J. Fontenot, of Evangeline Parish; Richard B. Fontenot, of Evangeline Parish; Gene Foster, of Lincoln Parish; Jeff Foster, of Lincoln Parish; Allen Herbert, of Jefferson Davis Parish; Chris E. Hightower, of Claiborne Parish; Keith Howard, of East Carroll Parish; Robbie Howard, of East Carroll Parish; Jim Hundley, of Acadia Parish; Gregory Kincaid, of Franklin Parish; Clarence Rickey Klumpp, of Acadia Parish; David Landreneau, of Evangeline Parish; David Manuel, of Lincoln Parish; James E. Marsalis Jr., of Claiborne Parish; Michael Talley, of Jefferson Davis Parish; Nicholas Talley, of Jefferson Davis Parish; Mervin Trull, of Lincoln Parish; James Wagley, of Natchitoches Parish; and Ronny D. Zaunbrecher, of Jefferson Davis Parish.

Robbie Howard also was presented the Outstanding Master Farmer Award in recognition of conservation efforts on his soybean and corn farm in Lake Providence.

“Master Farmer has made me proud of the way we farm,” Howard wrote in an application for the award, describing how it has helped him learn about soil health, irrigation, safely using farm chemicals and more.

“This was the breakthrough that farmers needed to see a better way of farming,” he wrote of the program.

The rigorous training has resulted in other states looking to Louisiana as a model for how to address environmental concerns related to farming, said state agriculture commissioner Mike Strain, who is a graduate of the program.

Louisiana Agriculture & Forestry Today

Reward Approved for Cattle Death Informant

Baton Rouge, La. (January 11, 2019) – Today, the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) Livestock Brand Commission approved a $500 reward for an informant who called in information to the Livestock Crime Stoppers Hotline. This stems from an investigation of four individuals arrested in connection with the deaths of a cow and three calves in St. Landry Parish.

The LDAF Brand Commission and St. Landry Parish Sheriff’s Department arrested 20-year-old Jameson LaGrange of Leonville, 21-year-old Jacob Hebert of Port Barre, 21-year-old Kaitlin Gauthier of Port Barre, and 18-year-old Christian Meche of Port Barre. All were charged with simple criminal damage to property valued at $6,500 and aggravated cruelty to animals.

“We want to thank this individual for coming forward and assisting in the arrests of these individuals. This crime was a complete disregard for the rancher’s property and the lives of these animals,” said LDAF Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M. “It is so important for witnesses or those who have relevant information pertaining to a criminal act to step forward and help bring suspects to justice.”

On March 3, 2018, LDAF brand commission investigators received a complaint from a rancher in reference to cattle killed on the levee near Port Barre. A cow and three calves were found dead in the pasture portion of the levee. It appeared they had been run over by a truck. Witnesses told investigators they heard what sounded like trucks mud riding in the area around midnight on March 3.

All LDAF brand inspectors are commissioned by Louisiana State Police and have authority in the performance of their duties.

LSU AgCenter holds rice clinics in southwest Louisiana

By Bruce Schultz
LS AgCenter

(01/14/19) CROWLEY, La. — In a series of meetings in southwest Louisiana, LSU AgCenter experts offered farmers advice for growing their 2019 crop.

Farmers met in Welsh, Abbeville, Ville Platte and Crowley and attended sessions held Jan. 3-10, only a few weeks from the start of planting season.

AgCenter rice breeder Adam Famoso said a new line of Provisia rice, PVL108, in development has outyielded the current Provisia offering, PVL01, and with low chalk. The grain size of PVL108 is shorter, but it has better second-crop yield potential of about 20 percent, he said.

Breeding work continues on more Provisia lines. "There's certainly material coming that should be an improvement," Famoso said.

A long-grain conventional line probably will be considered for release this year as a variety. It has an 8 to 10 percent yield improvement from Cheniere, he said.

A hybrid line, LAH169, has been developed by AgCenter plant breeder James Oard. It has better quality but slightly lower yield potential than current commercial hybrids available, Famoso said.

The AgCenter will be seeking commercial partners for possible commercial release of LAH169, Famoso said.

A graduate student, Christopher Addison, found a rice gene linked to resistance to Cercospora disease that will help in the breeding process to screen new lines.

AgCenter rice extension specialist Dustin Harrell said a new urease inhibitor, Anvol, will be released this year by Koch to help farmers with improved fertilizer efficiency.

If a field requires longer than three to five days to flood, a product such as Anvol or Agrotain should be used on urea nitrogen fertilizer, he said.

Farmers grew 434,000 acres of rice in Louisiana last year, and that included a reduced amount of Clearfield rice, Harrell said.

Clearfield acreage is declining because the technology is becoming less effective, but Provisia offers an alternative for fields with bad infestations of red rice and weedy rice, he said.

Furrow-irrigated rice, or row rice, is becoming more popular in north Louisiana, and the AgCenter is conducting more research on that practice.

Rice farmers had access to new herbicides last year, including Provisia, Loyant, RiceOne and Gambit, said AgCenter weed scientist Eric Webster.

Loyant's effectiveness may have been impaired when it was applied during hot weather, he said.

Webster warned that drift from aerial application of herbicides, insecticides and fungicides remains a concern. He advised that applications should not be made when there is no wind because that could lead to material being volatilized in an inversion to be carried far from the intended field.

Herbicide manufacturers advise applying their products with a 2-to-5-mile-per-hour wind, Webster said.

Arkansas farmers had so many problems with drift last year that regulators have imposed a system of restrictions, but most Louisiana farmers and aerial applicators have avoided that situation by following safeguards.

"If we don't continue those, we're going to get the same kind of regulations," he said.

AgCenter plant pathologist Don Groth told farmers that strobilurin-resistant sheath blight continues to spread, but more slowly.

The new fungicide Amistar Top didn't work as well as expected, possibly because it usually was applied on fields where the plant canopies were less open. The product was more effective when it was used with propiconazole, which probably acted as a surfactant, he said.

Planting early remains a good strategy against bacterial panicle blight. Fungicides for Cercospora should be applied earlier on late-planted rice, Groth said.

For fields that have blast problems, Stratego or another strobilurin-containing fungicide should be applied at heading he said.

Mark Shirley, AgCenter and Louisiana Sea Grant aquaculture specialist, said the white spot disease remains a threat to crawfish production. The disease affected about 10,000 acres of crawfish last year. Large, mature crawfish appear to be affected more.

"It's a very sudden death event," Shirley warned. "Your production goes to zero in a couple of days."

He said the viral disease appears to affect only crustaceans.

Shirley advised farmers to avoid contaminating fields by holding water in affected fields and cleaning boats and traps from affected fields.

The AgCenter is seeking research funding to learn more about white spot, he said.

The AgCenter will conduct a study of possible crawfish reductions in fields where a second rice crop is grown. Two 15-acre ponds at the South Farm of the AgCenter H. Rouse Caffey Rice Research Station will be used in the study.

AgCenter entomologist Blake Wilson said the new seed treatment Fortenza provides good protection against rice water weevils when it is used with Cruiser Maxx, but it has little effectiveness on stem borers.

Fortenza was tested at the Rice Research Station near Crowley for the past four years with good results against weevils.

Dermacor has 80 percent control against weevils and stem borers, and research has shown that one weevil can reduce yield by 1 percent, Wilson said.

He advised farmers to report any finding of apple snails. The invasive species is a threat to newly planted water-seeded rice, and it can cause major problems for crawfish producers.

An overabundance of rice on the world market is suppressing prices, said AgCenter economist Mike Deliberto. Last year's average U.S. yield of 7,500 pounds an acre was a 15-pound increase from 2017.

The U.S. Department of Agriculture projects a mid-year price of $10.70 per hundredweight.

U.S. rice exports are running 10 percent more than last year. Medium-grain rice production in Australia and Egypt has decreased, Deliberto said.

"This is going to open the door to pick up some market share," he said.

The possibility of exporting U.S. rice to China is strong, with details of a trade agreement pending. Vietnam currently supplies much of China's rice import demand, and it has increased its market share in South America, he said.

The soybean market is dominated by the U.S. and China trade war that has resulted in a large amount of soybeans in U.S. storage. The Brazil spring crop is nearing harvest, he said.

High yields and acreage in 2018 were equal to the 2016 crop, said AgCenter economist Kurt Guidry. Arkansas rice acreage this year is likely to equal last year's total.

The soybean oversupply is "massive," Guidry said. "We've never been anywhere close to where we are."

Rice and soybean farming will be a challenge in 2019, he said. "For both commodities, it will be a difficult year for profitability."

AgCenter economist Lawson Connor said Argentina and Mexico have purchased increased amounts of U.S. soybeans. Additional tariffs will be imposed by the Trump administration if no agreement is reached with China by March 2.

China bought more U.S. soybeans last month, but not as much as expected, he said.

It's possible that U.S. soybean acreage could shift to corn and cotton, and a decrease in Brazil's soybean production could result in higher soybean prices, Connor said.

Coming Your Way

The Camellia Club of New Orleans will hold its 79th Annual Show on January 26, 2019 at Delgado Community College – Student Life Center, next to WYES TV on 916 Navarre Ave, New Orleans, La, 70124.

Several hundred blooms will be on display by exhibitors from throughout the Gulf South. The show is open to the public free of charge from 2-4 pm. This year's plant sale will feature rare yellow camellias and several new introductions in addition to old favorites. The plant sale begins at 12:00 noon. Anyone is welcome to enter blooms from their own camellia collection in the show (membership not required). There is a novice class for amateur exhibitors. Blooms will be accepted from 8-10:30 a.m. Club members will be available to assist in with entering of the blooms. For any additional information please contact John Grimm at (504)-610-7828 or Nick Piazza at (504) 616-4378 or npiazzajr@gmail.com.

Bastrop Tractor Pull Presented by Boeuf River Antique Tractor Pullers at Morehouse Parish Activity Center. Any year tractor under 100 horsepower. Registration begins at 9 a.m. Pulls begin at 10 a.m. Admission is free. Hook-up fee is $10. For information call 318-237-1426 or 318-282-5527.

Louisiana Polled Hereford Assoc. will hold the 29th Annual Bayou Classic Polled Hereford/Hereford/F-1 Cattle Sale at noon on April 6, 2019 at the Dean Lee Livestock Complex (DeWitt Center) LSU-A, Alexandria. Fifty-five lots will be offered including cow/calf pairs, bred and open heifers, breeding age bulls, black baldies and F-1 cattle.
