State Launches Pet Preparedness Campaign

June is pet preparedness month

On May 31, the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) launched a music video called "Take Your Pets with You" in conjunction with Pet Preparedness Month and the start of hurricane season in June.

Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., is also urging everyone to Get a Game Plan for their family pet during emergencies. "History has proven time and again that many people are not ready in the event of a disaster. We have also learned that people will not evacuate their homes because they do not have a place to go with their pets. That is why we continue to provide information to help people prepare," said Strain. "Our goal, always, is to see that people and their pets get out of harm's way.

The LDAF is charged by the Louisiana state legislature to assist with the evacuation and sheltering of pets whose owners need assistance evacuating to a safe place.

The song was written, performed and donated by New Orleans musician Johnette Downing accompanied by trumpeter Kevin Clark of the Dukes of Dixieland, sousaphonist Kirk Joseph of the Dirty Dozen Brass Band, and percussionist Michael Skinkus. Downing is also an award winning children's book author dedicated to sharing her Louisiana roots in music, books and programs with children globally. She has performed on five continents and has received multiple awards including the 2017 Louisiana Writer Award.

Downing said, "During Hurricanes Gustav and Ike, I volunteered to help my sister who was setting up a co-located state pet/human shelter in Alexandria, La. I assisted families during the registration process, and learned about the items, such as a leash, carrier and proof of vaccination, that are required at shelters. As an evacuee with my own pet, I was inspired to write this song, as a checklist of these essential items, to better prepare children and their families to safely evacuate to shelters with their pets."

Strain: Protect Yourself from Unlicensed Grain Dealers

COMMISSIONER

Baton Rouge, La. (June 4, 2019) - Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., is warning farmers that they are taking huge monetary risks when they sell grain to unlicensed grain dealers.

Louisiana Revised Statute 3:3401 et seq. requires all grain dealers, warehouses and cotton merchants doing business in Louisiana to be licensed annually. A grain dealer is any person who purchases any agricultural commodity from producers or represents producers in the sale of agricultural commodities. La R.S. 3:3410.A. states that "No person shall engage in the business of buying or selling agricultural commodities from producers unless licensed by the commission."

"The only way to protect a farmer who has not been fully compensated for grain sold to a licensee is through the Grain and Cotton Indemnity Fund. The fund was created in 2008 to protect producers from insolvency, bankruptcy or any other type of loss," said Strain.

When a farmer sells grain to an unlicensed dealer, the farmer has no recourse through the state if the farmer does not get paid. A farmer would have to seek legal action.

Recently, the LDAF received a complaint from a farmer who sold grain to an unlicensed dealer from another state. "One farmer who has been scammed is one too many," said Strain.

While most grain is contracted well in advance of harvest, there are spot sales and open contracts occurring during the peak of harvest which will be occurring in the next several months.

To check if a grain dealer is licensed, go to www.ldaf.la.gov or download the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry application (App) available for both Android and Apple iphones.

Learn how to join LSU AgCenter Food Incubator at seminar June 19

The LSU AgCenter will host an informational seminar on joining its Food Incubator June 19 in Baton Rouge.

The seminar will be held at the AgCenter Botanic Gardens at Burden, 4560 Essen Lane, from 10 a.m. to noon.

The event is free. People who plan to attend should register online at <http://bit.ly/2WcLBGR>.

The seminar will provide information on the Food Incubator's services, laws pertaining to food businesses and basic food safety.

The Food Incubator, which launched in 2013, gives food entrepreneurs access to experts, equipment and facilities that help them with production and marketing.

In 2018, more than 20 companies made about 100 tons of food products — including snacks, baked good, condiments and beverages — in the incubator.

Leaf spot disease appearing on Indian hawthorn

Entomosporium leaf spot is a foliar fungal disease that affects several important woody ornamentals, including Indian hawthorn and red tip photinia.

In Louisiana, it also occurs on fruiting pear, said LSU AgCenter plant doctor Raj Singh.

“Early symptoms on Indian hawthorn appear as small, reddish-purple spots on young growth,” Singh said.

As the disease progresses, the center of the spots turn light to dark gray. Older spots become darker in color with sunken centers and develop yellow halo around them. Leaves turn reddish-yellow before falling off.

“The pathogen survives on the infected leaves on the plant or on leaves fallen on the ground beneath the plants,” he said. “Rainfall and water splashed from sprinkler or overhead irrigation aid in dispersal of spores from older infected leaves to young, expanding healthy foliage.”

Extended periods of leaf wetness are required for infection to occur, Singh said.

spots can be seen all year round, but the disease develops rapidly under cool, wet weather during fall and spring.

Successful management of Entomosporium leaf spot requires an integrated disease management approach, Singh said.

Removing severely infected plants and plant debris, including infected leaves from the ground, is most important in reducing the disease.

Good cultural practices — including planting disease-free healthy plants in sites with good air circulation, planting in well-drained fertile soils at proper plant spacing, watering early in the morning to reduce the leaf wetness period and following a good fertilization program — help plants grow vigorously and create environmental conditions less conducive for disease development.

“Timely application of fungicides and uniform coverage of plants with fungicides play an important role in managing this disease,” Singh said. “Fungicides containing chlorothalonil, myclobutanil, propiconazole or tebuconazole as the active ingredient may be used as soon as new growth appears in spring.”

Multiple fungicide applications may be required during favorable weather conditions for effective management.

For additional information on fungicide use, check the LSU AgCenter Plant Disease Management Guide at www.lsuagcenter.com.

among my favorite to read to children, and she has once again done an outstanding job of creating a song and video for children that explain the importance of personal responsibility in a way that is fun and educational,” said First Lady Donna Edwards. “Hurricane Season is here, and we know from experience that it is never too early to have a plan in place or teach our kids about how they can help keep their pets safe during severe weather. Pets are part of the family and we must treat them as such. I applaud Johnette and Commissioner Mike Strain for getting the word out.”

Governor's Office of Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness Director James Waskom added, “For many people, pets are a part of the family. As you finalize your family's emergency plans, make sure you have a solid pet plan. Contact your local emergency manager to find what resources are available and how to connect with those resources. It's important to be responsible pet owners and take these preparation steps now, before you face an emergency. As part of your emergency kit, have supplies for your pets. Include items that may be needed for travel during an evacuation.”

The video was produced by the LDAF at no additional cost to the state. To view or download the video, go to www.ldaf.la.gov or click on this link <https://vimeo.com/339362608>. A planning guide for pet owners is also available for download HERE.
