Five Families recognized as Louisiana Century Farms

Five more Louisiana families are the recipients of the Louisiana Century Farm award. The Louisiana Century Farm Program recognizes and honors Louisiana's farmers, ranchers and forestry landowners who have owned family farm land for 100 years or more.

"The world needs American agriculture," said Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M.

For fifth generation farmer Jim Marsalis, gaining the Century Farm designation for his family's Claiborne Parish business, Marsalis Cattle Company, LLC, is quite the accomplishment. "It's a lot of hard work. It's been instilled in us that you work for what you've got. We have a strong farm work ethic," said Jim Marsalis. His wife, Genie, added, "There are highs and lows in farming. We have a lot of faith in God that he will provide. We brought up our children in the church and our faith is strong."

This year's recipients are: William H. Brabham Farm in Kentwood, La.; H&J Gossen Properties, LLC, in Rayne, La.; Guarino Stock Farm in Glynn, La.; Marsalis Cattle Company, LLC, of Athens, La.; and Moro Plantation of Lismore, La. The parishes represented are: St. Helena, Acadia, Pointe Coupee, Claiborne and Concordia.

LDAF rolls out mobile pet shelter

COMMISSIONER

Baton Rouge, La. (July 13, 2019) - Today, the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) dispatched its mobile pet shelter to the F.G. Clark Activity Center on Southern University's campus which is now sheltering evacuees.

"In stressful situations, people are often comforted knowing their pets are also out of harm's way and close by," said Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M. "We have learned from past experience that people will remain in harm's way before leaving without their pets."

The mobile pet shelter was sent to F.G. Clark at the request of Animal Control Director Hilton Cole through the East Baton Rouge Parish Mayor's Office of Homeland Security and Emergency Preparedness.

The mobile pet shelter can hold approximately 50 pets. It is a tractor trailer equipped with metal cages, generator, battery power and a cleaning station. It has an air ventilation system to provide proper air circulation and temperature for the pets. The LDAF has two mobile pet shelters.

The LDAF is designated by the Louisiana Homeland Security and Emergency Assistance and Disaster Act to transport and shelter household pets during declared emergencies

The LDAF also continues to provide emergency fuel to first responders and for other emergency related activities.

actually have farms in operation for 100 years," said Farm Bureau President Ronnie Anderson. The ceremony took place at the 97th annual Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation convention in New Orleans.

Stephen Austin with Louisiana Land Bank added, "I cherish the time I had on the family farm with my father and grandfather. Today, many of us have the challenge of not living on the farm. The goal remains the same. We must continue to instill the same values in the next generations."

For the Marsalis family, son Mitch who is a sixth generation farmer said there is nothing like having the support of your family when you are a farmer. His plan is for his two sons to be the seventh generation of farmers in the family. "One of the most important things to me is to keep this legacy going and hold onto this land. I plan to turn it over to my two boys one day. Family support will help me do that."

To be eligible for the program, the farm must be in a family continuously for at least 100 years, must have at least 20 acres of the original founder's land, must have at least one owner who is a resident of Louisiana and must produce at least $1,000 in farming income annually. Tree farms are exceptions to the annual farm income requirement.

Dr. Rogers Leonard with LSU AgCenter said, "While we talk about the family farm, it is also about family commitment. Maintaining a family farm for 100 years is a long time."

Strain added, "The decisions we make today affect the generations of tomorrow. When I left our family farm in St. Tammany Parish to go to LSU Veterinarian School, I wanted to get away from the family farm. But the day I graduated, guess where I went? I went right back to my family farm."

Since 2014, 64 Louisiana family farms have received a Century Farm designation.

FRESH PRODUCE FARMERS, PACKERS, DISTRIBUTION CENTERS

The Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry is able to provide fresh produce farmers, packing facilities and distribution centers in Louisiana with basic Good Agriculture Practice/Good Handling Practices (GAP/GHP) audits, as well as, GAPs Harmonized audits (with or without the Global addendum).

GAP audits are a voluntary for hire service that certifies a producer's efforts to provide safe, quality product free from contamination to the consumer.

For more information or to schedule an audit, contact Audrey Carrier at our Hammond office at 985-543-4024 or email acarrier@ldaf.state.la.us.

LSU AGCENTER HAS STORM-READY RESOURCES

With hurricane season well underway, it is not too late to protect your property.

By Tobie Blanchard
LSU AgCenter

The LSU AgCenter has resources to help in the preparations and, if necessary, recovery.

The AgCenter website has a wealth of information for preparing your landscape, securing your home and protecting pets and livestock. Visit the Are You Ready page at <http://bit.ly/2NMfLgj> to learn more about making the proper preparations before a storm hits.

The page also has information on gathering a three-day food supply and packing an evacuation box.

At the AgCenter's Flood Maps Portal at <http://bit.ly/2xJTGDW> people can see the flood risk in their areas. The maps have Federal Emergency Management Agency's Flood Insurance Rate Maps, over road maps and aerial photos.

Recovery information in the Disaster Information Resource Series is available online at <http://bit.ly/2JtycCi>, which includes links to a wide array of websites and publications. Information also is available by contacting your parish extension office.

JULY IS FIG TIME IN LOUISIANA

By Heather Kirk-Ballard
LSU AgCenter Horticulturist

It's July, and we have a couple of events to celebrate. For one, our nation's Independence Day. And for the many who grow figs, this date has become synonymous with the harvest season. Figs are one of the most widely planted fruit trees in the Louisiana home landscape because they're easy to grow and readily available. With little effort, some space in the yard and plenty of sunshine, anyone can grow trees that will produce nutritious figs every July.

Figs (Ficus carica) are native to the Middle East and western Asia and have been naturalized in North America. They are one of the earliest known fruit trees to have been cultivated by humans and have been used for medicinal purposes throughout history. The fruit is high in potassium, iron and fiber. They are the famous main ingredient of the Fig Newton cookie, and fig preserves are common staple of many homes.

The trees are deciduous and can grow between 10 to 30 feet tall, although larger trees have been found. The branches typically spread wider than their height. Figs flourish in hot, dry climates, and the fruit requires a great deal of sun to ripen.

Botanically speaking, the fig is not actually a fruit. It is a syconium — a portion of the stem that enlarges into a sac that contains both flowers and seeds growing internally. Weird, right? Figs that we are accustomed to contain only female flowers that do not require pollination. However, one of the coolest stories of coevolution is that of the fig tree and the fig wasp. Fig trees coevolved to require a specific pollinator: the fig wasp.

Another interesting thing about figs is they belong to a group of plants that produce a milky sap called latex, like that found in rubber trees (Ficus elastica). Contact with the milky substance can cause an irritating skin dermatitis in some people who are sensitive to it. So be careful when pruning figs not to get the milky sap on your skin.

Figs are relatively easy to grow and care for. But the trees have a naturally shallow root system, so if there is one thing figs are finicky about, it is their need for water as they become established. This is especially important in the first year. Newly planted figs will need to be well-watered during the first months and especially during hot months with little rain through the first year. During extended droughts, you need to water young trees frequently.

You can do this by using a soaker hose or trickling garden hose at the base of the tree trunk for 20 to 30 minutes when there has been little rain. For older, established trees, you can set a sprinkler out for 30 to 45 minutes during summer when rain has been scarce and repeat every five to seven days until rains come.

Fig trees will drop fruit if they are drought stressed. The problem cannot be corrected once the fruit has suffered or begun to shrivel. You can help protect the roots and prevent moisture loss by applying a 3-to-4-inch layer of mulch, such as leaves, pine straw or pine bark, spread over the soil underneath the canopy of the tree.

Fall through early spring is a great time to purchase fig trees from local nurseries and plant them in the landscape. Make sure you have adequate space as fig trees can grow 15 feet or more in height and width. Figs need a minimum of six hours of full sun for proper production, and the fruit will be found on the new growth from spring and early summer.

Trees ordinarily do not produce a good crop of fruit until the third or fourth year after planting. You will generally see small green figs where the leaves join the stem, even on very young trees. But these fruit usually fail to ripen and just drop off. The variety LSU Purple is an exception, often producing small crops one to two years after planting.

You can trim the plants into a large bush shape with several trunks or into a tree shape with a single trunk. Prune no later than late February to early March to help maintain vigor, create the desired shape and control its size. Only moderate pruning is needed each year. When cutting back heavily to reduce the size of an older tree, fruit production the following summer will generally be reduced.

Regular spraying with pesticides is generally not necessary on fig trees. The only common problems are two fungus diseases that attack the foliage. Thread blight causes problems early in the season, and fig rust causes leaf spotting and scorch in late summer and fall. You can use spray applications of a copper-based fungicide, one in May and another in August, to keep these diseases from being too destructive. Spraying is not necessarily required, and the trees manage to survive these problems with no long-term health issues.

Occasional problems with white, fuzzy mealybugs can be controlled with light horticultural oil. Old trees may develop rot in the trunk and major branches. Just remove dead limbs as needed. Birds also love the fruit, so there's that to contend with.

A few varieties of figs are available at local area nurseries. One of the most popular and reliable is Celeste, which produces small to medium-sized, violet-to-brown colored fruit with a light red pulp. These are resistant to fruit splitting and souring. Another good variety is Florentine, which produces large, green-yellow fruit that can appear twice a year.

The LSU AgCenter has released several great varieties. LSU Purple has become a favorite. It produces medium-sized, dark purple fruit with good resistance to diseases. It can produce two crops, a main crop in July followed by a later crop that sometimes lasts into December. LSU Gold produces a flavorful yellow fig with light red to pink pulp, O'Rourke, named after an LSU horticulturist, has medium-sized, light brown fruit; Champagne, has medium-sized, yellow fruit; and Tiger has large, light brown fruit with a dark brown stripe.
