By Milford Fryer

The temperatures were in the high 90s and the humidity was low and the wind was blowing. Conditions were perfect to drive the trash fire that got out of hand into a serious wildfire. Two trucks from the local fire department rolled up the narrow country road, and volunteers began grabbing hoses and cranking up the onboard pumps. But even before they arrived, Donald “Duck” Goodwin wheeled in with his Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) truck, unloaded his bulldozer and began cutting a fire lane to enclose the flames. In short order Goodwin had contained the blaze to an area less than an acre. What could have easily been a raging threat was reduced to smoldering debris in a matter of minutes. A sheriff’s deputy wrote the person who started the trash fire a ticket for ignoring the burn ban.

Another state firefighter had been standing by with another bulldozer as a backup. The LDAF requires its firefighters to respond to fire calls in pairs or more for safety reasons. The LDAF Office of Forestry is legislatively tasked as the state’s primary agency responsible for the detection and suppression of wildfires within the state.

Goodwin is headquartered in Oak Grove, but he is well-known and works well with the eight volunteer departments in West Carroll Parish. He’s also the chief of the volunteer department in the village of Pioneer.

Goodwin is a Forestry Crew Leader with the LDAF, partnered most recently with Forestry Crew Specialist J.J. Gregory. They are in District 2 of six districts across the state. The scene above is a frequent occurrence for people in jobs like theirs. They employ other types of equipment to fight wildfires, but the bulldozers with large plows on the back and front blades are their mainstay.

The bulldozers have safety glass enclosed cabs, surrounded by steel protective cages for increased safety. Goodwin says he would be fine with an open cab unit, with fewer restrictions on vision, but the enclosed cabs let them work in smoke filled areas. The dozers have unit numbers on top of the cabs so they can be directed by airplane during large wildfires with several dozers present.

Goodwin said he’s already formulating a plan to attack a wildfire as he’s driving up. Generally, he hits the ground digging a trench to bare mineral soil with the plow. Then, he works to build a fire break about two dozer blades wide around the perimeter to keep the fire from spreading. But every fire is different and different strategies may be required.

The two men said the biggest seasons for wildfires are the dry, hot summers, and the season that is upon us now. “Our normal fire season begins after the first frost,” Goodwin said.

State forestry firefighters battle wildland fires only. Causes of fires are varied, from lightning to arsonists, to escaped debris burns. People burning debris is a big cause of fires. Flat tires, especially on trailers, can cause fires once the rims hit the roadbed and start sparking.

Gregory said he remembered a guy who was pulling a trailer in which a chain came loose and was sparking on the roadbed. “He didn’t know it,” he said of the driver. It was just a couple of links making sparks. It started five fires in a couple mile area.”

LOUISIANA AGRICULTURE & FORESTRY TODAY

China lifts ban on United States poultry

On Nov. 14, 2019, the United States Department of Agriculture (USDA) announced China's decision to lift its ban on poultry imports from the United States, said Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M.

"Not only is this great news for America, but this is welcome news for Louisiana. The lifting of the ban opens the market for Louisiana producers as well as the rest of the country. Poultry in Louisiana is a $2 billion industry," said Strain. "Also, the Port of New Orleans is one of the largest poultry exporters in America. It will also benefit being able to export poultry to China."

The USDA said China is an important export market for America's poultry farmers and estimate they will now be able to export more than $1 billion worth of poultry and poultry products each year to China.

China banned all U.S. poultry in January 2015 as a result of the avian influenza outbreak in December 2014, even though the United States has been free of this disease since August 2017. The United States exported over $500 million worth of poultry products to China in 2013.

The United States is the world's second largest poultry exporter, with global exports of poultry meat and products of $4.3 billion last year.

Smokey Bear raising awareness of wildfire prevention

Smokey Bear and representatives with the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry visited with school children at Olla Elementary in October which is Fire Prevention Month.

Arson is another matter. The LDAF has forestry enforcement agents who are full-fledged law enforcement officers, who investigate suspicious fires and can write citations and make arrests. Gregory remembers one bicycling arsonist who was setting fires in Morehouse Parish and just across the state line in Arkansas. The arsonist was fairly prolific, and local deputies as well as state inspectors were watching closely. One officer stopped the bicyclist to ask if he had seen anything that could help find the fire starter, and the guy confessed it was him. "We got him with six counts, and Arkansas got him with nine" Gregory said.

Goodwin was already a volunteer firefighter in Pioneer before he was hired on at the LDAF. He worked for a local farmer who was also a volunteer, he said.

"Frankie Jones was chief in Pioneer and he told me about this job that was coming open if I wanted it. I've been here ever since." That will be 24 years come February, he said.

Gregory has been with the state a little over 13 years. Originally from Houston, he moved to Bastrop in 2002 to be with family. He was in building construction, but the work was sporadic. "I always wanted to do something to help the public, but I never had. When the state forestry department offered me a position I was up in an attic hooking up an ac unit," Gregory said of his hiring.

Gregory and Goodwin said the state has about 110 wildland firefighters statewide. They are forest specialists, and they have lots of other work to do besides fighting fires. One of the jobs that take a lot of time is checking for compliance on land in the federal Conservation Reserve Program (CRP). The CRP pays landowners to grow trees or native grasses for wildlife habitat on what had been marginal farmland. The requirements are strict and strictly enforced.

The specialists even help perform understory burns for pine forests and prescribed burns for some grasslands.

From tree planting inspections, conducting prescribed burns to maintaining the fire equipment, Goodwin said they stay busy.

However, all other duties are abandoned for fire calls. "When they have a woods fire, they want us there," Goodwin said.

The state forestry firefighting for wildfires has undergone a metamorphosis, though. Fire towers were once a major source of detection for wildfires and directing firefighters. Now the towers are a thing of the past, shut down and most removed, as the agency has progressed to aerial detection with aircraft.

Goodwin said the bulk of his fire calls come via cell phone. More people moving to the country puts more eyes on the woods and grasslands. Local fire departments call. Airplanes spot fires and direct firefighters. Private citizens also assist with the reporting of wildfires. And response times are better than ever. Rapid response means firefighters can contain the fires before they get out of control.

Figures from the LDAF show that during the ten-year period ending last year, the department suppressed an average 1,279 wildfires annually.

A department spokeswoman said wetter than normal conditions and efforts by the LDAF during the past five years have helped to keep the numbers lower than they might have been otherwise.

All LDAF wildland firefighters are FEMA and National Wildfire Coordinating Group certified, and the firefighters must attend annual training every October at a state facility in Woodworth.

Yet there's another part of the job that isn't fighting fires or inspecting tree plantings, etc. that is also very important. Smokey Bear presentations!

"We've got Smokey Bear costumes we wear," Gregory said. He said the costumes are used for fire prevention programs at classrooms, job fairs, or programs at which they are requested. Mostly, they hand out brochures and pose for pictures, he said.

As Smokey Bear says, "Only you can prevent wildfires." But if they do occur, please know that LDAF wildland firefighters are ready to respond 24 a day, 365 days a year.
