18-year old Cade Jenkins beat three other blacksmiths competing on the “Forged in Fire” show on the History channel. The competitors were challenged to make a Rooster Head French Pioneer Sword.

By Veronica Mosgrove

Growing up, 18-year old Cade Jenkins referred to himself as “the tool man.” Jenkins started blacksmithing at 12-years old. “I started out woodworking with my dad, David. Then I started melting lead.”

The Loranger, La. native followed in his grandfather’s, Jim’s, footsteps who started blacksmithing in 1982. His grandfather remains an inspiration today. “All I wanted was a forge from my Paw Paw. He said, ‘When you have straight A’s, I’ll give you a forge.’ Well, the A’s never came,” laughed Jenkins.

But Jenkins continued to develop his craft under the guidance of his Paw Paw. “There are few places that teach it. Everything I’ve learned is from older men and YouTube videos,” added Jenkins. Jenkins started doing architectural blacksmithing such as home decorations. Eventually, he started making knives that he would sell.

In 2015, a reality show called “Forged in Fire” started airing on the History channel. “I watched the show with my parents and I would critique it. They told me, ‘If you think you can do better, try to be on the show.’ So, I did,” said Jenkins. Not only was he invited on the show, but Cade beat three other blacksmiths competing in season 7’s episode 20. The competitors were challenged to make a Rooster Head French Pioneer Sword.

“I never felt super nervous, but I’ve also made approximately 70 knives. I just had to make another knife – well, a sword – which is basically a knife on steroids,” said Jenkins.

Jenkins’ grandfather agreed that his grandson’s cool demeanor worked to his advantage. “I watch the show and there are a lot of overqualified people, but they get flustered,” added the elder Jenkins.

Jenkins said the biggest challenge he had was making the sword historically accurate while putting his spin on it. “There aren’t a lot of images or descriptions of a Rooster Head French Pioneer Sword,” he said.

Jenkins said doing something “beyond the norm” such as this competition was definitely worth the experience. For him, it became a real confidence booster.

Interestingly, Jenkins said he and his

Strain responds to Bloomberg’s remarks

Baton Rouge, La. (February 17, 2020) – A video of remarks made by presidential hopeful Mike Bloomberg in 2016 regarding how to be a farmer has gone viral. In it, Bloomberg states, “I could teach anybody to be a farmer…you dig a hole, put seed in, put dirt on top, add water, up comes the corn. You can learn that.”

In response to that statement, Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., said, “Mr. Bloomberg, your simplified comment on what it takes to be a farmer shows a true lack of knowledge of today’s farmers and the daunting tasks of feeding and clothing the world. Farmers constantly deal with challenges during planting seasons – weather, disease and pests, equipment costs, and instability in the market place. They are required to understand the science of agriculture which involves chemicals to control disease and pests. They must adjust to weather conditions in which a flood, freeze or drought could wipe out a crop. To survive, they must also understand the business of agriculture.

Farmers are constantly looking for sustainable ways to work the land. A farmer is a steward of the land. They must protect their natural resources to maintain a productive crop. Being a farmer is more difficult than just digging a hole. On this President’s Day, and as Dwight D. Eisenhower once said during a speech in Peoria, Illinois in 1956, ‘Farming looks mighty easy when your plow is a pencil, and you’re a thousand miles from the corn field.’ There are no days off in farming. For many farmers, it is their passion. It is what they were born into. It is what they know. And for that, we should all be grateful. But by no means is it as easy as digging a hole.”

Fresh produce farmers, packers, distribution centers

The Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry is able to provide fresh produce farmers, packing facilities and distribution centers in Louisiana with basic Good Agriculture Practice/Good Handling Practices (GAP/GHP) audits, as well as, GAPs Harmonized audits (with or without the Global addendum). GAP audits are a voluntary for hire service that 29certifies a producer’s efforts to provide safe, quality product free from contamination to the consumer.

For more information or to schedule an audit, contact Audrey Carrier at our Hammond office at 985-543-4024 or email acarrier@ldaf.state.la.us.

Baton Rouge, La. (Feb. 20, 2020) — State rules and regulations for the Louisiana Industrial Hemp Program are now finalized, Louisiana Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., announced today. The Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) also has begun issuing licenses for the production, processing and transportation of industrial hemp in Louisiana.

“Our Industrial Hemp Program administrators worked hard to ensure the regulatory framework was in place as soon as feasibly possible and in time for the 2020 planting season,” Strain said. “The LDAF will continue to assist and support the new industrial hemp industry.”

The LDAF Industrial Hemp Program is the state’s designated regulatory authority for the production, processing and transportation of industrial hemp.

Any person growing, handling, transporting or processing industrial hemp or hemp seed is required to possess a current license issued by the LDAF. All applicants are required to submit a completed application, background check and license fees.

The four types of industrial hemp licenses are as follows:

- Grower License — authorizes the licensee to cultivate, handle and transport industrial hemp regardless of the intended use;
- Processor License — authorizes the licensee to handle, process and transport industrial hemp;
- Seed Producer — authorizes the licensee to produce, transport and sell industrial hemp seed;
- Contract Carrier — authorizes the licensee to transport industrial hemp; required when the transporter is not the licensed grower or processor of the plant material.

For more information on the Louisiana Industrial Hemp Program, visit www.ldaf.state.la.us and click on the industrial hemp tab.

Louisiana Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., and Hemp Program Director Lester Cannon were on hand as the first industrial hemp license was issued to Nanette Noland.

Grandfather never prayed for anyone to lose the competition. “We just prayed for Cade to do his best and for God’s will to be done,” said the elder Jenkins. “I never say I am proud of Cade. I just say he blesses me.”

As for the “Forged in Fire” winner, he said he will use his $10,000 winnings toward school. He attends Southeastern and is studying welding inspection. It will also allow him the freedom to spend the summer as a Christian camp counselor. Of course, he will also continue to make his knives. He is constantly working on his craft.

“I want my work to be perfect. It’s more than a hobby for me. I want it to be professional. I want to be able to hand my Paw Paw a knife and for him to say, ‘That’s perfect.’”

For more information on Jenkins’ knives, go to www.jenkinsblacksmithing.com. He can also be followed on Facebook and on Instagram.

Jenkins’ grandfather was a featured exhibitionist at the 1984 World’s Fair in New Orleans. During his career, he forged a lot of period correct metal work for the restoration of historical structures including the Cabildo which caught fire in the New Orleans French Quarter in 1988.
