Crawfish Tales with Commissioner Mike Strain visits HydroBest Growers

In the most recent episode of the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry's storytelling series, Crawfish Tales with Commissioner Mike Strain, we visit the Certified Louisiana company HydroBest Growers in Baton Rouge. Paul Bray started HydroBest Growers, a hydroponic greenhouse growing lettuce locally in Baton Rouge, LA.

Hydroponics is a very unique and interesting way to grow fruits, vegetables, herbs, and flowers. The term can be used to describe any one of several ways plants can grow without soil. Hydroponics is also known as soilless gardening, which includes containers filled with water or other non-soil materials, such as gravel, sand, vermiculite, crushed rock, Styrofoam, cinders, expanded shale, or haydite. Instead of using soil, a nutrient-rich solution is used. In this case, hydroponic lettuce grows in water mixed with a nutrient solution instead of growing in soil.

Hydroponics may seem like a futuristic type of gardening, but the concepts have been around since the 1500s. In fact, it was thought that the Hanging Gardens of Babylon were grown hydroponically through a series of aqueducts and channeling of water through the tower.

This type of gardening has stood the test of time and provides many benefits. One of the biggest benefits may be the larger yields achieved. Hydroponic lettuce especially grows quickly. This is because they take up nutrients faster unlike those in soil which spend a lot of time and energy extending their roots to find nutrients. It takes close to three weeks to get the first harvest. A complete harvest is achieved in between 45 and 85 days. Additionally, you can harvest a leaf at a time, which ex-

LOUISIANA AGRICULTURE & FORESTRY TODAY

LDAF celebrates women in agriculture at the 2022 Women in Ag Conference

Women are often the unseen faces of agriculture. The history of women in agriculture is one that not many people discuss. Research shows that since about 10,000 B.C., women have played a part in how we source and harvest our food. Unfortunately, there isn't much data on them – in some ways, they were silent contributors throughout history, up until World War II. In the 1940s, the number of female farmers surged. The Bureau of Agriculture and Economics reported that more than 2 million men left farm jobs between April 1940 and July 1942. World War II had them abandoning the farm to support war efforts through military service and/or wartime industries. By the war's end, that number had climbed to 6 million. However, it is important to note that U.S. food production had increased 32% over pre-war levels during this time. Women picked up the slack and reminded us that they are not new to agriculture. Some of the greatest farmers and agri-business professionals have long been women. Today, we are seeing more and more women in the industry. According to USDA's 2017 Census of Agriculture, the United States had 1.2 million female producers, accounting for 36 percent of the country's 3.4 million producers. The number of female producers increased by 27 percent between 2012 and 2017. The number of farms with female producers increased by 23 percent. The report also showed that female producers are slightly younger, more likely to be beginning farmers, and more likely to live on their farms than male producers. More than half of all farms (56 percent) had a female producer in 2017. These female-operated farms sold $148 billion in agricultural products in 2017, with 49 percent ($73 billion) in crop sales

CERTIFIED DELICIOUS RECIPES

FRIED GREEN TOMATOES

Submitted by Kinloch Pecan Oil

Ingredients:

- 4 large green tomatoes
- 2 eggs
- ½ cup milk
- 1 cup all-purpose flour
- ½ cup cornmeal
- ½ cup Panko bread crumbs
- 2 teaspoons coarse salt
- ¼ teaspoon black pepper
- Kinloch Pecan Oil for frying
- Seasoned boiled shrimp (optional)

Instructions:

Slice tomatoes ½” thick and drain on paper towels. Whisk eggs & milk in medium bowl. Scoop flour onto a plate. Mix cornmeal, bread crumbs and seasonings on another plate. Dip tomatoes into flour to coat. Dip into milk & egg mixture. Dredge in breadcrumbs. In large skillet pour ¼ inch to ½ inch pecan oil over medium heat. Place in batches of 4 to 5 depending on skillet size. Tomatoes should not touch. When brown, flip to other side. Drain on paper towels. Serve as side dish or serve on top of Boston Bibb lettuce with white balsamic vinaigrette. Top with remoulade sauce and shrimp.

Notes: Iron skillet is best. We use 25 Star White Balsamic Vinegar by Home Appetite. We like Louisiana Fish Fry brand remoulade sauce.

LDAF is proud to be part of the Shared Stewardship agreement

A Shared Stewardship agreement between the U.S. Department of Agriculture's (USDA) Forest Service, Natural Resources Conservation Service, and the State of Louisiana was signed on April 6 during a ceremony in Baton Rouge, Louisiana.

This agreement establishes a framework for federal and Louisiana State agencies to collaborate more frequently, focus on accomplishing mutual goals, further common interests, and effectively respond to the increasing ecological challenges such as the health of forests across all boundaries. "Louisiana's natural resources, our forests, wildlife, streams, and fish, will benefit tremendously as we accentuate our efforts as natural resource managers, working more closely together for the people of Louisiana and the nation," stated Governor John Bel Edwards.

In addition, the agreement will allow the agencies to promote the vitality of wildlife and fish populations on federal, state, and other lands, provide for the protection of native plant and wildlife populations from the interference of non-native invasives, as well as address any additional natural resource concerns in Louisiana. "Louisiana is my home state," said Forest Service Chief Randy Moore. "I am so pleased to be here with my partners in conservation as we work together to manage our landscapes and forests across this beautiful state."

Another benefit of Shared Stewardship is that agencies will be able to respond through this agreement more effectively to forests and community needs as related to hurricanes, tornadoes, and other severe weather events, engage tribal nations supporting tribal sovereignty, and ensure tribal partnering in a shared stewardship approach to land management as we strengthen the economy and advance racial equity. "As I look across Louisiana, I see productive fields and forests across the landscape. As we focus on an all-lands approach, we accept this challenge together to manage these lands for timber, crops, wildlife, and fish," noted LDAF Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Mike Strain, D.V.M.

The agreement was signed by: John Bel Edwards, Governor, State of Louisiana

Randy Moore, Chief, USDA Forest Service

Dr. Mike Strain, Commissioner, Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry

Richard Kacir, Louisiana State Conservationist, USDA Natural Resources Conservation Service

This new agreement centers on USDA's commitment to work with the State of Louisiana, tribal nations, and other partners to use the best available science to identify high-priority forests which need attention to management treatments that consider forests and ecosystem health and to ensure the long-term sustainability of public and private lands. "I am truly excited about this agreement," stated State Conservationist Richard Kacir. "From the pine hills to the marsh bayous, the land and the people of Louisiana will surely benefit from this historic agreement."

"Shared Stewardship strengthens our commitment to coordinating and prioritizing forest management activities using our collective resources and authorities," said Wade Dubea, Louisiana State Forester. "Land management challenges like wildfires, severe drought, and invasive species do not recognize borders or boundary lines. Through working together, developing joint priorities, and using collective authorities, the state and the Forest Service can be sure that the scale of the work will match the scale of the challenge."

Shared Stewardship addresses forest management challenges, such as catastrophic wildfires, increased public demand, degraded watersheds, and outbreaks of insects and disease. Shared stewardship involves working as a collective across property lines and jurisdictions to accomplish shared management goals. The USDA Forest Service follows three key principles through its shared stewardship strategy: working at scale across landscapes, developing cross-boundary solutions, and jointly setting priorities. The Shared Stewardship priorities will be those agreed upon by Louisiana and the USDA Forest Service.

The agreement will focus primarily on the Kisatchie National Forest and surrounding areas. The signing of the agreement marks a historical event in Louisiana as this is the first of its kind in the state. For over two years, efforts to sign the agreement have been in the works. The LDAF is excited to have finally solidified our partnership with state and federal agencies to ensure that our state's forests are viable and available for future generations.

The agreement can be found on the USDA Forest Service Southern Region's website at <https://www.fs.usda.gov/main/r8/workingtogether/partnerships>.

tends the harvesting period.

"We just give them a good, nutritional buffet, and they can pick and choose what they want. As a result, they don't grow a tremendous amount of roots," said HydroBest Growers owner Paul Bray. "Another advantage to this type of garden is that as our plants grow, we can slide them across the table and give this next crop some more space. We can progressively space our crops, and that's one of the big secrets of hydroponics and high-density production."

Another benefit of hydroponics is its sustainability. Lettuce is a leafy vegetable that will not get to the flowering stage. Therefore, it has simple nutrient solutions that don't need to be changed over the growing season. Water and fertilizers can also be conserved in a hydroponic system as there's no runoff or leeching. Hydroponics, in general, saves water substantially by reducing evaporations. This efficiency makes hydroponics the ideal way to grow sustainable and healthy lettuce. Best of all, hydroponic systems reuse and recirculate their water minimizing water inputs.

"You have a beautiful setup here. And of course, you can control it - use less water, control your nutrients. Everything is just perfect. And you can see the quality. Extremely fresh," remarked LDAF Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., during his visit.

Hydroponic vegetable gardens are also space savers. This is a great advantage to gardeners with limited space or those living in urban areas. Many times, you're also able to grow more plants in a smaller space than you would in a traditional soil garden. This is because plants grown in soil need to extend their roots out to find nutrients and gather water. There's no need for that in a hydroponic system as you're providing everything that the plant needs directly to its roots. Harvesting your vegetables in a hydroponic garden is also easier. Especially for those gardeners with physical and mobility problems because the vegetables are grown at a waist-high height, and growers do not have to bend so much.

With hydroponics, you also reduce the soil-borne pests and diseases drastically by not introducing soil into the system at all. Also, weeds tend to be much less of an issue in a hydroponic system as there's no soil to maintain a seed bank as like there is with in-ground gardening. Hydroponics eliminates the chances of weeds, pests, and disease attacking your vegetables and other issues like floods, drought, and damages due to storms. This is because in these systems the environmental conditions are controlled.

"We are growing a much healthier, cleaner product. And here again, because it is not rained on, it's away from dirt, and there are no animals, so our e-coli dangers are much lower in greenhouse production lettuce. We also tend to have higher nutritional values mostly because of the freshness," noted Bray.

Another notable benefit is that a hydroponic garden allows you to grow your vegetables throughout the year. These gardens can also be done on a flexible scale. There are both home and commercial growers.

"We talk about the need to increase food production for everyone. And this is a unique way to do a lot of production in a small amount of space and minimize the inputs," said Commissioner Strain.

Hydroponic gardens are highly versatile, allowing for a wide range of vegetables to be grown. The most common vegetables grown in hydroponic gardens include tomatoes, peppers, cucumbers, and lettuce. Because hydroponic growing uses water and not soil to grow, there are some vegetables you can't grow. For example, any vegetable in the root family, including carrots and potatoes, can't be grown using hydroponics.

Lettuce is one of the easiest plants to grow using this method of gardening. You can grow your hydroponic lettuce from either seedlings or saplings. You'll use a seed starter to sow your lettuce seeds and then transplant the lettuce to the hydroponic system once its roots have developed and it has four to six leaves.

You can grow any of the popular types of lettuce in water. However, growers strongly prefer loose head varieties when it comes to growing lettuce hydroponically. Loose lettuce varieties have the advantage that you can pick their leaves individually. The picked leaves re-grow and replace themselves, enabling this variety of lettuce to prolong its harvest life. Greenleaf, butterhead, and romaine are the most ideal varieties for a hydroponic garden.

Many systems are available to be purchased on the market today, or you can make a trip to your local hardware store and build one relatively simply. A few types to choose from are the wick system, which has a unit of water below the plant and uses a rope or other materials to wick the water up to the plant roots; and the ebb and flow system, which floods the plant for a short amount of time then drains away. The nutrient film technology is a system that most people are familiar with, sometimes called a re-circulating system. This is the system HydroBest Growers utilize. With this system, a unit of water is pumped to the top of the system. Then through gravity, the water flows back down across the plants' roots and back into the unit. Water culture is another hydroponic system where the plant sits above a bucket of water, and the roots dangle in a nutrient solution. This system typically has an air stone or some sort of device creating air bubbles at the bottom of the system. And lastly, the drip system is very similar to the nutrient film technology, but it just simply drips on the plant roots.

Fortunately, you don't have to commit to a hydroponic garden to enjoy the freshness of its vegetables if you aren't quite ready to dive in. HydroBest Growers deliver twice weekly to local grocery stores throughout the Greater Baton Rouge area. To see a list of the stores where you can find the lettuce, visit <https://www.hydrobestgrowers.com/>.

HydroBest Growers sell living lettuce which is sold with the roots still attached. This allows the lettuce to keep fresh longer, even without refrigeration. They can be used as a centerpiece today and a salad tomorrow. To store on the counter, simply remove the lettuce head from the bag and place the roots into a bowl of water. Remember to rinse before consuming it.

"We sell the plant as living lettuce, so the roots are still attached. So, if you take it home and it is a little wilted, just put it in the water. It will pick right up. And because it is living, you can leave it in the bags that we put it in, seal it up, and store it in the refrigerator for three weeks. It will still look like it did when you put it in, except for maybe one yellow leaf," said Bray.

"They certainly look fantastic, and I am glad you are a Certified Farm-to-Table member. It's always really wonderful when we can get freshness straight to our consumers," commented Commissioner Strain.

For businesses like HydroBest Growers, the decision to become Certified Louisiana can mean a great deal. The Certified logo helps to assure their clients and customer base that they are authentically local and proud to be from Louisiana.

HydroBest Growers was the third stop on our journey as Crawfish Tales travels across Louisiana, profiling our Certified Louisiana companies. We look forward to the opportunity to showcase more stories from the fields of our growing community of Certified Louisiana families.

Firewood Theft Leads to Arson, Arrest Made

The Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry's (LDAF) fire crews responded to a wild-fire on Gitty Up Lane in Leblanc on March 11. The investigation revealed that the fire was an act of arson, and it was set close to where someone had been cutting down hardwood trees for firewood.

As a result of the investigation by the LDAF enforcement agents, it was learned that twenty-four-year-old Bradley Ashworth of Kinder, La., and forty-seven-year-old Lance Templet of Iowa, La., went onto the property without permission and cut timber for firewood to sell at a later date. While Ashworth cut the firewood, Templet set a fire. The fire burned approximately 76 acres of timber.

Ashworth nor Templet owned the property or had permission to be on the property. An arrest warrant was issued for Ashworth for theft of timber and criminal trespass. Ashworth was arrested on March 25 and booked into the Allen Parish Jail on LDAF warrants and other outstanding Allen Parish warrants. His bond is $20,300. Not more than $1,000 in firewood was cut from the property. However, the fire caused approximately $6,000 in damages to the timber.

"Timber is a valuable, long-term investment. It is imperative for landowners to pay close attention to activity on their property and immediately report a suspected crime," said LDAF Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M. "LDAF enforcement agents take agriculture and forestry-related crimes seriously, and they will seek justice when individuals break the law."

A warrant was issued for Templet for arson and criminal trespass. Templet has yet to be located. Anyone with information on the whereabouts of Templet is urged to call the LDAF 24-hr hotline at 1-855-452-5323.

products sales. These farms accounted for 38 percent of total U.S. agriculture sales. They also accounted for 43 percent of U.S. farmland.

Data for the USDA Census of Agriculture is collected every five years. The department is currently developing its 2022 census. The last day to sign up for the 2022 Ag Census is June 30, 2022. Sign up to be counted at <https://www.agcounts.usda.gov/static/get-counted.html>.

The Inglewood Farm tour spoke to participants about their organic produce and regenerative agriculture practices.

The census results reinforce that women have always played a vital role on the farm. They are farmers and farmworkers, ranchers, agricultural researchers, and educators. They work the fields, birth livestock, do daily chores, keep the books, and take an active role in farm management decisions.

Louisiana has approximately 3,500 farms primarily operated by women. Along with these female farmers, women in all fields of the agriculture industry gathered for the Louisiana Women in Agriculture conference on April 7 and 8 in Alexandria. The conference is an opportunity for women passionate about agriculture to network and learn from experienced speakers and ag-related vendors from across the state and nation.

“It was an honor to speak to the women helping drive one of Louisiana’s most important industries,” said LDAF Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M. “They have a compelling story to tell, and I want to make sure their voices are heard. Most importantly, I want them to have access to the tools and resources they need to succeed. That’s what is so wonderful about the Women in Ag conference. It offers solutions and opens doors for those looking to grow their business.”

The LDAF’s Stay Rooted Louisiana program and Certified Louisiana program were among the conference’s vendors. The Stay Rooted Louisiana program is one of the department’s newest initiatives and aims at reducing farm stress.

The program’s objective is to share tools and information to better equip Louisiana’s farmers and ranchers with stress-reducing seminars on Farm Succession, Financial Management, and Disaster preparedness.

The Certified Louisiana, Certified Cajun, Certified Creole, Certified Craft Beverage, and Certified Farm to Table logo program was established to promote Louisiana made, grown, manufactured, or processed products to enhance and promote Louisiana’s agricultural industry. When you shop products with a Certified logo, you can be sure you are supporting a Louisiana business and Louisiana family.

The second day of the conference was comprised of agriculture tours. Certified Louisiana sponsored the Alexandria Organic Farming & Brewing Tour. The Inglewood Farm portion of the tour focused on local, organic farming. The farm has been organic since 2012. They grow fruits and vegetables year-round and sell them at local farmer’s markets regularly. They shared their vision for healthy foods in the community with the group. The last half of the tour covered local craft brewing with Huckleberry Brewing Company.

Zwolle Loggers & Forestry Festival

The 2022 Zwolle Loggers and Forestry Festival will be Saturday, April 23. This year will mark the 26th festival. The parade line-up will be on the Zwolle School campus and begin at 10 am. This year the grand marshal is the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M. Opening ceremonies will take place at the festival grounds immediately after the parade. The Zwolle Loggers and Forestry Festival began in 1995 and pays tribute to the logging and forestry industry in our area. We hope that you will be able to attend and enjoy.

Spring Garden Day Festival

Spring Garden Day is scheduled for Saturday April 23, 2022, from 8am to 2pm. at the Hammond Research Station, 21549 Old Covington Hwy, Hammond, LA 70403. There will be lots of new and unusual plant sales, deciduous azalea sales, Master Gardener plant swap, and horticultural education such as gardening questions, container gardening, plant selection, garden pests, tours, and children's activities! Master Gardener Plant Sale under the Oaks

Visit the Beauregard Master Gardeners under the live oaks of the old Rosepine Research Station (176 Research Road, Rosepine, LA.) on Saturday, April 23, 9 am - 1 pm. They will be having a plant sale of herbs, vegetable plants and ornamental plants. A plant clinic will also be open to identify insect pests, weeds, and plant diseases, and to prescribe treatments for garden issues. For more information about this event, please contact Keith Hawkins, Area Horticulture Agent (AHA), 337.284.5188. Also, you may also obtain regular "green thumbs" updates about horticulture from LSU AgCenter by sending your request by email to khawkins@agcenter.lsu.edu.

Central America Outbound Trade Mission to Honduras

San Pedro Sula, Honduras
August 10-11, 2022

The United States is Honduras's main trading partner in total trade and in agricultural products. In 2019, Honduras imported about $1 billion of consumer-oriented products from the world. The United States had a leading 36 percent ($347 million) market share. U.S. agricultural exports increased with the implementation of the Dominican Republic-Central America-Free Trade Agreement (CAFTA-DR) in 2006. Most U.S. agricultural products have duty-free access to Honduras. Close proximity to the United States allows containerized cargo from gateway cities to be transported to Honduras in 2 to 3 days. With one of the lowest logistical costs in the region, Honduras also serves as a distribution point for Central America. Consumers have strong preferences for U.S. products. U.S. products enjoy a high-quality image among Hondurans. Importers prefer trading with U.S. exporters because of reliability.

This Outbound Trade Mission offers the unique opportunity for our companies! SUSTA will take our Southern exporters to San Pedro Sula, Honduras to better understand the market and meet with key contacts of the retail and foodservice industry. Both established exporters and new to export companies can get a glimpse of the Honduran market in a more accessible way by signing up for this outbound trade mission.
