LDAF to hold unwanted pesticide collection day Nov. 9 in Franklinton

Agricultural producers, pesticide applicators and homeowners can drop off unwanted pesticides during the Unwanted Pesticide Pick-Up day on Nov. 9, 2022, from 7 a.m. until 1 p.m. at LSU AgCenter Southeast Research Station (SERS), 41217 Bethel Road in Franklinton.

The Unwanted Pesticide Pick-Up Program, sponsored by the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry, provides individuals who need assistance with disposing of pesticide products properly.

Unwanted Pesticides will be collected for disposal at no cost to producers, applicators, or homeowners, and it is completely anonymous for those who wish to participate. This is a pesticide only disposal pick-up event. Fumigants, waste oils, paints, and gasoline/diesel will not be accepted.

"Farmers and commercial pesticide users generally cannot dispose of pesticides in household hazardous waste programs making this an important service for LDAF to provide to those who need to get rid of unwanted pesticide or agricultural products," said Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Mike Strain, D.V.M. "Improperly disposed pesticide wastes can create serious hazards for the environment.

As always, we work to ensure that the environment and the health of our citizens are protected by providing individuals an opportunity to properly dispose of these products."

All pesticides will be accepted. Containers will be supplied for transportation to the collection site if old containers are damaged. For planning purposes, we strongly encourage an inventory form be filled out and returned to Bryan Gueltig at bgueltig@agcenter.lsu.edu prior to October 28, 2022. This helps the disposal contractor prepare for the amount of material that is being dropped off. Inventory sheets can be obtained online at <https://www.ldaf.state.la.us/ldaf-unwant-> ed-pesticide-pick-up-program/ or from your local LSU AgCenter office.

Currently in Louisiana, an individual wishing to dispose of pesticide products must contact a licensed contractor for disposal, which results in a costly fee based on pounds of product(s) submitted for disposal. The LDAF program will not require a fee for the disposal of unwanted pesticides. The cost of the program will be funded through fees associated with pesticide manufacturers' product registrations in Louisiana. All pesticides offered for sale in Louisiana must be registered annually with the LDAF.

The LDAF has retained a licensed contractor for the program. This contractor will assume all responsibility for pesticide products delivered to the designated locations and for disposal.

For more information, call LDAF's Girvus Johnson at 225-925-3763 or your local LSU AgCenter office.

At the National Association of State Departments of Agriculture (NASDA) annual meeting in Saratoga Springs, New York, yesterday, Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry's (LDAF) Press Secretary Jennifer Finley was awarded the 2022 NASDA Honor Award for Communications.

The purpose of the NASDA Communications Award is to recognize an individual for outstanding work in media and public communications within a state agency resulting in an improved understanding of agriculture and agricultural programs.

Her varied experience includes successful roles in news, entertainment, and agriculture as a writer, director, producer, editor, videographer, on-air talent, and most recently, press secretary for the LDAF Commissioner Mike Strain, DVM.

"We are fortunate to have Jennifer's professional expertise, talent, and creative perspective at LDAF. Jennifer approaches her job with unwavering enthusiasm. It is not just a job to her - it is a calling," said LDAF Commissioner Mike Strain, DVM. Turning Data Into Decisions:

LSU AgCenter Works To Give Louisiana Sugarcane Farmers A Sweeter Deal Using AI, Drones

Slattery McCollam farms 2,800 acres of sugarcane near Schriever and Thibodaux in southern Louisiana, in Terrebonne Parish and Lafourche Parish. It's a large farm—a land area equivalent to half of all football stadiums in the world.

McCollam is in his second year of a research project with the LSU AgCenter. Their shared goal is to produce more and sweeter cane while saving on fertilizer, primarily nitrogen. They use a combination of technologies, including drones, satellite imagery, and artificial intelligence, or AI.

Luciano Shiratsuchi, associate professor in the LSU School of Plant, Environmental & Soil Sciences and coordinator of the LSU AgCenter digital ag team, heads down to meet with McCollam on a regular basis. They crunch data and conduct experiments on a 40-acre field of sugarcane to find the literal sweet spot between inputs and outputs—the least fertilizer in, the most sugar out.

"We're in our second year of research with LSU, and we already know more," McCollam said. "We're moving away from blanket applications of nitrogen toward variable rates where we get the most benefit. Now, we can look at the data and it's all there in black and white. It's not a guess. We're not guessing anymore."

Nitrogen is essential for the growth and vigor of sugarcane. But excess nitrogen, whichever amount doesn't get absorbed by plants, gets washed into rivers and lakes and eventually into the ocean, contributing to algae blooms, lower oxygen levels, and the persistent "Dead Zone" in the Gulf of Mexico, which LSU has been monitoring since 1985. Too much fertilizer on farms can cause environmental problems that threaten habitats and important industries, such as fishing and tourism. For farmers, it also digs holes in their pocketbooks. This year, the price of fertilizer went up two and a half times, from about $300 to $750 per ton.

"That just really cuts into our bottom line because it's a fixed cost," McCollam said. "I can't pass that onto the consumer—I've got to eat every price increase that comes to me. So, the only thing we can do is try to optimize and find that sweet spot. Not too high, not too low. Just right, and hope our crops continue to pay the bills."

Shiratsuchi flies LSU drones over McCollam's farm, called Ellendale. The drones are outfitted with multispectral cameras, which measure the amount of chlorophyll and photosynthetic activity, meaning growth and vigor, in plants. Thanks to GPS, the result is a highly detailed map, with variable health scores for almost every plant, row after row, where four different amounts of fertilizer are applied. When McCollam then goes on to harvest his sugarcane in the fall, he brings a combine with a yield monitor and GPS into the field, so they know if their previous measurements and yield predictions were correct.

(It was only recently that sugarcane yield monitors capable of generating yield maps were launched commercially, and the LSU digital ag team is validating the technology.)

The rich data this research produces gets fed into a model that relies on AI and machine learning to find connections between hundreds of parameters that influence the growth of crops—not just nitrogen levels. The goal is to improve the model to where it can accurately predict how actions taken by McCollam today could help increase his profit, be it weeks, months, even years into the future.

"Sugarcane is grown in a three-year cycle, so it's not the same as planting in the spring and harvesting in the fall," McCollam said. "Before starting over, we harvest two stubble crops, and how much sugar we get depends on a lot of things, including the age of the crop. In two years, working with LSU, we'll know exactly where we need to be with nitrogen, from start to finish."

Slattery McCollam's cousin, Gerald McCollam, works for the USDA in Houma on sugarcane research. The cousins often discuss how sugarcane farmers, and the sugar industry at large, are "always pressured and pushed" by forces out of their control, such as commodity pricing, the cost of fertilizer and fuel, foreign trade agreements, and that age-old topic—the weather.

"Weather can basically wipe you out and hurt you really bad," Slattery McCollam said. "To me, 80 percent of our crop is weather. The other 20 percent is us."

Gerald McCollam agrees. "The pressures are many, and anything we can do to mitigate challenges is something we're interested in," he said. "By and large, farmers are very savvy about what affects their bottom line. AI and machine learning can help us use only what we need when we need it, and that's a very important thing for the sustainability of this industry."

"Beyond optimizing yields, weed control is another very important thing in sugarcane farming," Gerald McCollam continued. "Herbicides are expensive, and overuse leads to resistance where the plants you're trying to control no longer are controlled by those herbicides. Poor weed management can destroy an industry if you're not on top of it."

All of the variables in agriculture don't lend themselves well to controlled experiments in laboratories. Even with feet in the field on a daily basis, it can be hard to predict the size and quality of the upcoming harvest. That's the central promise of using AI as part of the ongoing LSU-Ellendale collaboration, Gerald McCollam argues:

"The big data aspect is something that will allow us to take advantage of the variability and the complexity itself because patterns could emerge that we wouldn't think to look for."

Shiratsuchi tries to get results to Ellendale Farms as soon as he can.

"Farmers have to be patient since research isn't a fast process, but using these AI and machine learning techniques, we can speed up the process compared to traditional experimentation that can take decades," Shiratsuchi said.

LSU AgCenter is also working with industry partners to develop and validate emerging technology that tells sugarcane farmers the exact sugar content in their cane throughout the growing season. This helps farmers decide when to harvest and make better business decisions throughout the year.

"A lot of what our farmers are up against, from supply chains to the weather, is begging to be optimized by AI, and we finally have the data to do it," said Thanos Gentimis, the LSU AgCenter digital ag team's machine learning expert. "If you go back just 20 years, maybe one percent of farmers knew what a drone was. Now, we have an estimated adoption rate of around 13 percent, especially in larger operations. New technologies are transforming farming."

His team is working toward AI solutions not just for sugarcane, but also for corn, wheat, and soybeans. Their goal is ultimately food security for all state residents and sustainability of the Louisiana agriculture industry.

"I personally focus on sugarcane and cotton because these two crops are strategic for Louisiana—you can't grow cane and cotton in the Midwest," Shiratsuchi said. "Our environment is unique, so our research has to focus on what makes money for the Louisiana farmer."

See the new crane that will make it easier to unload grain at the Port of Greater Baton Rouge

BY TIMOTHY BOONE

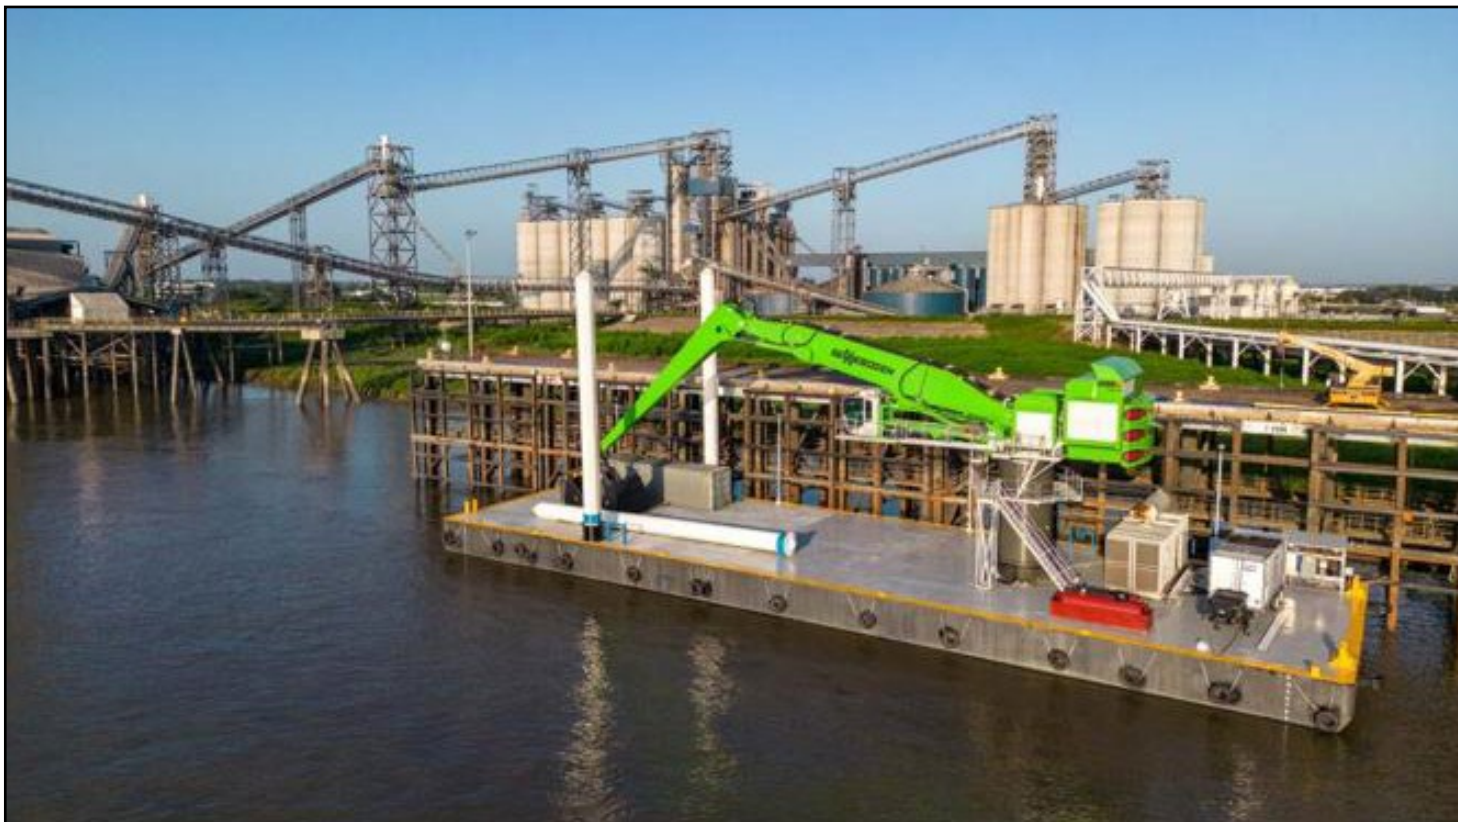

The Port of Greater Baton Rouge has received a barge-mounted crane that will make it easier to unload grain despite the level of the Mississippi River.

The $7 million pedestal crane will unload grain directly from barges into Louis Dreyfus Company's elevator. Because the crane has the flexibility to unload barges at times of high or low river levels, this will benefit local farmers, said Jay Hardman, the port's executive director.

The electric crane was paid for with state capital outlay funds.

Port officials said the crane will begin operations next month.

Biden-Harris Administration Invites Applications for Grants Under the Fertilizer Production Expansion Program

Grants Will Increase Innovative, American-Made Fertilizer Production, Spur Competition and Help U.S. Farmers Address Rising Costs

U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) Secretary Tom Vilsack announced that the Biden-Harris Administration is inviting U.S. farmers and agricultural producers to apply for grants under the Fertilizer Production Expansion Program. The Administration recently announced it is making $500 million in grants available through the program to increase American-made fertilizer production, spur competition and combat price hikes on U.S. farmers caused by the war in Ukraine.

"The Fertilizer Production Expansion Program is one of many ways the Biden-Harris Administration invests in the agricultural supply chain right here at home," Vilsack said. "This funding will bring production and jobs back to the United States, promote competition and support American goods and services. Under the leadership of President Biden and Vice President Harris, USDA continues to create a resilient, secure, and sustainable economy to support opportunities for local businesses and people across this nation. This program is a critical part of that effort."

USDA begins accepting applications today via www.grants.gov. Applicants have two opportunities to submit their applications:

- Applicants may apply until Nov. 14, 2022, to receive priority for projects that increase the availability of fertilizer (nitrogen, phosphate, or potash) and nutrient alternatives for agricultural producers to use in crop years 2023 or 2024.
- Applicants may apply until Dec. 29, 2022, to receive financial assistance to significantly increase American-made fertilizer production to spur competition and combat price hikes. This application window supports applicants who need more time to make additional capacity available.

Eligible entities are for-profit businesses and corporations, nonprofit entities, Tribes and Tribal organizations, producer-owned cooperatives and corporations, certified benefit corporations, and state or local governments. Private entities must be independently owned and operated to apply.

The maximum award is $100 million. The minimum award is $1 million. The grant term is five years.

Potential applicants and stakeholders may email questions to fpep@usda.gov. For more information, visit www.rd.usda.gov/fpep or <https://www.farmers.gov/global-food-insecurity>.

Background

Fertilizer prices have more than doubled since last year due to many factors, including price hikes caused by the war in Ukraine, a limited supply of the relevant minerals, high energy costs, high global demand and agricultural commodity prices, reliance on fertilizer imports, and a lack of competition in the fertilizer industry.

The Fertilizer Production Expansion Program is part of a whole-of-government effort to promote competition in agricultural markets. The funds are being made available through the Commodity Credit Corporation.

Grants will be used to support independent, innovative, and sustainable American fertilizer production to supply American farmers. Funds also will expand the manufacturing and processing of fertilizer and nutrient alternatives in the U.S. and its territories.

The program will support fertilizer production that is:

Independent, and outside the orbit of dominant fertilizer suppliers. Because the program's goal is to increase competition, market share restrictions apply.

Made in America. Products must be produced by companies operating in the U.S. or its territories, to create good-paying jobs at home, and reduce the reliance on potentially unstable, inconsistent foreign supplies.

Innovative. Techniques will improve fertilizer production methods and efficient-use technologies to jumpstart the next generation of fertilizers and nutrient alternatives.

Sustainable. Ideally, products will reduce the greenhouse gas impact of transportation, production and use through renewable energy sources, feedstocks, and formulations, incentivizing greater precision in fertilizer use.

Farmer-focused. Like other Commodity Credit Corporation investments, a driving factor is providing support and opportunities for U.S. agricultural commodity producers.

The Department is hosting an informational webinar:

Potential applicants and other stakeholders are also encouraged to attend a webinar on Oct. 6, 2022, to learn about application requirements. Pre-registration is required. To register, visit: https://www.zoomgov.com/webinar/register/WN_dUsGJW-FZQtGuh_BWcC7EZQ.

These grants are part of a broader effort to help producers boost production and address global food insecurity.

USDA to Invest $8 Million to Expand Monitoring of Soil Carbon

WASHINGTON, September 27, 2022 – The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) plans to invest $8 million to support and expand monitoring of carbon in soil on working agricultural lands as well as assess how climate-smart practices are affecting carbon sequestration. This is part of the Department's efforts to build out a national soil carbon monitoring network, which was kicked off with soil carbon monitoring on Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) acres in 2021. USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) is requesting proposals for regional projects focused on soil organic carbon stock monitoring, which are due Nov. 28, 2022. This investment in building out the soil carbon monitoring network is part of USDA comprehensive effort to address climate change through climate-smart agriculture and forestry.

"Healthy soils are a powerful tool when it comes to sequestering carbon. We want to enhance our measurement tools and integrate them into program delivery to advance quantification efforts of the effects that climate-smart agricultural practices have on carbon sequestration," NRCS Chief Terry Cosby said. "Soil health management practices and activities are a tremendous part of our strategy when it comes to climate-smart agriculture and forestry."

NRCS will fund four agreements, one in each region: Northeast, Southeast, Central and West. Funding ranges from $1.5 to $2 million, and projects will last two to four years. Applications must include a strategy to reach equity of program delivery in historically underserved communities. Partners will work collaboratively to complement soil carbon monitoring efforts taking place across USDA.

NRCS is looking for projects that will:

- Deliver training on soil sampling for soil organic carbon and bulk density, data collection and management and processing methods.
- Conduct outreach to producers to use NRCS' soil carbon monitoring practice.

- Coordinate with NRCS national and state offices and centers to provide technical assistance.
- Identify and recruit specialists to help producers with implementing soil carbon monitoring.
- Reaching diverse producers to participate in soil carbon monitoring and other NRCS conservation activities.

Eligible entities include Tribal governments, nonprofits, universities, state and local governments and members of the Cooperative Ecosystem Studies Units Network.

Additional information is available in the notice of funding, which will appear on grants.gov. Once the notice posts, NRCS will begin accepting applications via grants.gov. NRCS plans for a 60-day application window.

New Soil Organic Carbon Stock Monitoring Conservation Evaluation and Monitoring Activity

Beginning in fiscal 2023, NRCS will offer a new conservation evaluation and monitoring activity (CEMA) to provide assistance for measuring soil organic carbon stocks. The new activity is used to quantify the levels of organic carbon stored in the soil and monitor the change in soil carbon stocks before and after the implementation of a conservation practice or conservation plan.

A qualified individual will use a hydraulic probe to sample soil to one meter depth. The soil will then be tested for organic carbon and bulk density to provide organic carbon stock levels to farmers and ranchers. Partners will play a critical role in training individuals on the sampling methodology as well as conducting outreach to producers to inform them of the opportunity through NRCS.

More Information

These partnerships are part of USDA's broader effort to leverage the expertise, experience, and capacity of other organizations to address climate change and to broaden footprint of climate-smart agriculture. For example, USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) is investing $10 million in its Monitoring, Assessment and Evaluation effort to sample, measure and monitor soil carbon on CRP acres to better quantify the climate outcomes of the program.

More broadly, USDA announced earlier this month its plans to invest up to $2.8 billion in 70 selected projects under the first pool of the Partnerships for Climate-Smart Commodities funding opportunity, with projects from the second funding pool to be announced later this year. Ultimately, USDA's anticipated investment will include more than $3 billion in pilot projects that will create market opportunities for American commodities produced using climate-smart production practices.

Meanwhile, the Inflation Reduction Act (IRA) will also deliver $19.5 billion in new conservation funding to support climate-smart agriculture. This historic funding includes approximately $20 billion to support conservation programs that are oversubscribed, meaning that more producers will have access to conservation assistance that will support healthier land and water, improve the resilience of their operations, support their bottom line, and combat climate change. This includes $8.45 billion for the Environmental Quality Incentives Program, $4.95 billion for the Regional Conservation Partnership Program, $3.25 billion for the Conservation Stewardship Program, and $1.4 billion for the Agricultural Conservation Easement Program. The IRA also provides $300 million to support the quantification of carbon sequestration and greenhouse gas emissions reductions, directly tied to the conservation program investments. The agreements funded through today's announcement will be complimentary to these quantification efforts and monitoring across the Department.

Farm Safety CornerTractor Safety

Farm tractors provide the primary source of power on many farms. Studies show that the farm tractor is involved in a high proportion of farm fatalities and severe injuries. To avoid them, follow safe management principles and implement a tractor safety program on your farm.

- Develop a “safety first” attitude. Follow safe work practices all the time and set a good example for others.
- Be physically and mentally fit when operating tractors. Fatigue, stress, medication, alcohol, and drugs can detract from safe tractor operation. Take breaks.
- Read operator’s manual and warning decals. Pay attention to safety information.
- Equip the tractor with a Rollover Protective Structure (ROPS) and wear seat belts.
- Inspect the tractor for any hazards and correct them before operating.
- Make sure everyone who operates a tractor has received training and is physically able to operate it safely.
- Shut down equipment, turn off engine, remove key and wait for moving parts to stop before dismounting equipment.
- Keep bystanders and others away from tractor operation area. Do not allow “extra riders,” especially children.

Inspection

- Are ROPS in place and seat belts used?
- Is a PTO master shield in place?
- Is the operator’s platform clear of debris?
- Is a reflective “Slow Moving Vehicle” emblem posted?
- Are lights and flashers operational?

- Are tires properly inflated?
- Is the hydraulics free from leaks?
- Are Brakes can be locked together?
- Is a 20 lb. “ABC” fire extinguisher in place?
- Is a fully equipped first aid kit on the tractor?

Mississippi Man Arrested for Theft of Livestock in LaSalle Parish

A Mississippi man was arrested on September 21 by agents with the Mississippi Department of Agriculture in Copiah County, Mississippi. The arrest was a result of a warrant from LaSalle Parish, Louisiana, regarding an investigation conducted by the Livestock Brand Commission.

Thirty-four-year-old John Colter Pyron of Hazlehurst, MS, was arrested in Copiah County on a warrant for Theft of Livestock. The arrest was a result of an investigation by the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry’s (LDAF) Brand Commission. On September 22 Pyron waived his extradition to Louisiana. Bond has not yet been set.

During the investigation, it was determined that Pyron received a horse from the owner and agreed to sell the horse for a set price in December 2021. The investigation revealed that Pyron failed to sell the horse at the set price, and upon his failure to do so, the owner requested the horse returned. The result of the investigation was that the owner of the horse was never paid the predetermined set price, and Pyron failed to return the horse. The acquisition of the livestock and failure to render proper payment is a violation of R.S.14:67.1 (Theft of Livestock).

Pyron was arrested earlier this year by the Livestock Brand Commission on a similar complaint in another parish.

“We are seeing more and more violations and complaints of this nature,” said LDAF Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M. “People are turning to the power of the internet to help sell their livestock but are finding themselves the victim of untrustworthy sellers. Louisiana law is specific when dealing with the purchase of livestock and protects livestock owners from persons not complying with proper payment, even when it comes to internet sales. I encourage anyone trying to sell their livestock through a third party online to get multiple references before entrusting them with your animals.”

The Livestock Brand Commission was assisted in this investigation by the Mississippi Department of Agriculture.

The Livestock Brand Commission maintains a 24-hour Crimestoppers hotline at (800) 558-9741 for the public to report thefts.

Document Damage to Help La. Farm Bureau Help YouBy Andy Brown

As Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation (LFBF) continues to work with agencies and government officials to quantify the losses from August rain events, summer drought, and other weather-related losses to this 2022 crop, we have received word from Louisiana’s Farm Service Agency that they are actively documenting the production losses from 2022 natural disasters.

This documentation effort will be the difference between a Secretarial Disaster Declaration or not. A Secretarial Disaster Declaration will be key in LFBF’s efforts to secure ad hoc disaster funding and ultimately can decide whether you and your parish are eligible for such funds if they become available to USDA.

Thus, we now encourage you, as you complete harvest of crops or have data to quantify production losses on your farm, to contact your USDA-FSA office and accurately report your production losses to covered commodities from natural causes of loss (drought, excessive moisture, etc.).

For a list of USDA-FSA county offices and their contact information, you can visit:

<https://www.farmers.gov/working-with-us/service-center-locator>

- Or -

Call the FSA state office to receive your local service center information at (318) 473-7721.

For further information about the status of disaster assistance or the work LFBF is doing in this area please contact Andy Brown at (225) 922-6209 or andyb@lfbf.org. Please make your voice heard with USDA-FSA and report accurate data to verify the impact of these unfortunate weather events.

USDA Offers Expanded Conservation Program Opportunities to Support Climate Smart Agriculture

National Resource Conservation Service (NRCS) updated Conservation Stewardship Program (CSP) to allow an agricultural producer to immediately re-enroll in the program following an unfunded application to renew an existing contract. Previously, if a CSP participant did not re-enroll the year their contract expired, they were ineligible for the program for two years.

This ineligibility was imposed on CSP participants even if their failure to sign a renewal contract was due to the unavailability of funds, which is beyond their control. USDA is now waiving this two-year ineligibility restriction for all CSP applications.

This year, producers renewed 2,600 CSP contracts covering 3.4 million acres. Applicants with unfunded fiscal 2022 CSP renewals will receive letters this month, notifying them they are automatically eligible to apply for future CSP funding opportunities, rather than needing to wait two years to reapply.

How to Apply

NRCS accepts applications for conservation programs - including EQIP and CSP - year-round, however you should apply by state-specific, signup dates to be considered for each year's funding. To apply, you should contact your closest USDA service center.
