In 1966, a 1200 lb., 20' long and 15' high dairy cow mascot named Betsie Barbé was introduced. She became a fixture in parades. Today, she is still used for grand openings and other events although her parade days are over.

Barbe's Dairy Honored in Westwego

By Veronica Mosgrove

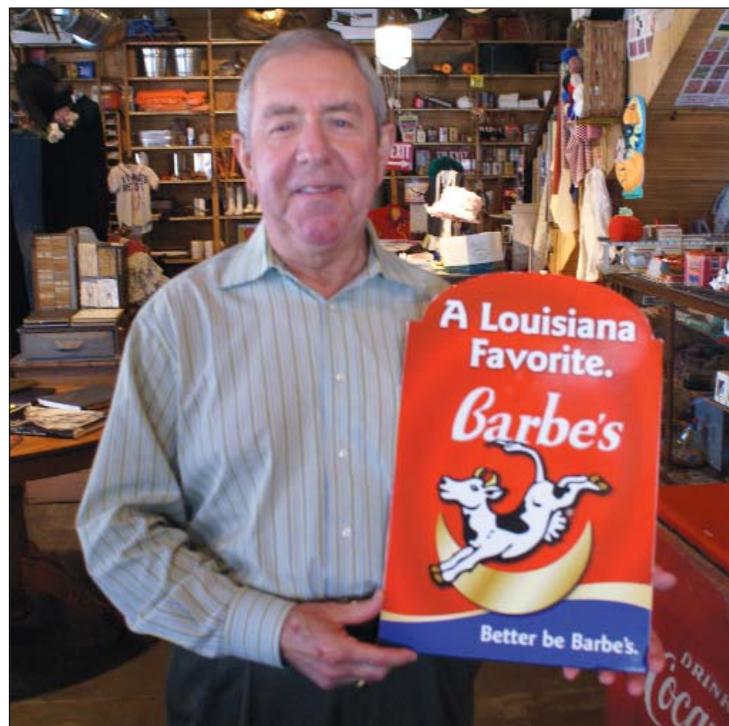

It all started when a teenage boy from a farming village in Southern France came to America looking for an opportunity. It was 1908 when Victor Barbé arrived in New Orleans, after which in 1910, his wife to be, Lucie Gollentz left Northern France and arrived in New Orleans. They met and got married.

Together, they bought some dairy cows and rented land in the Uptown area of New Orleans. The area was referred to as "Cow Patch Alley", said Laurent Barbé, Jr. By 1918, Victor and his wife, noticed the Westwego area was growing rapidly so they purchased a tract of land there and moved their barn and cows across the river by ferry to start selling milk from their new home.

Soon the Great Depression hit. Victor did what he could to save his land. He sold his cows and did odd jobs. It wasn't until many years later that Victor's son, Laurent or "Larry" as he was called, who had a sixth grade education, went to war and while he was recovering in a hospital from injuries, found a book and educated himself on dairy science. When he returned, he decided it was time for the family to get back into the dairy business.

"My father built his first building in 1945. He bought a pasteurizer, my grandfather bought the cows, sold the milk to my father and he started bottling pasteurized milk," said Laurent Barbé, Jr.

From the time they were in diapers feeding the calves with a baby bottle, Larry's two son's Laurent Jr. and Victor were always working in the dairy. In the late '60s, early '70s, Laurent, Jr. and his brother, Victor along with their father became even more active in running the day to day operations. By the mid '80s, the two sons had taken over the company 100% and built it to become the largest dairy in the New Orleans area.

Laurent's wife, Susan, says her husband, was known as the "milk man" around the city. "I can remember him working in the plant doing anything that was needed, as well as driving the trucks and making deliveries. He and his brother did what it took to make Barbe's the business it became." She added, "He would make such good friends with the customers. Everybody liked him. The cafeteria ladies at the schools he delivered to would constantly give him treats such as cinnamon buns and he would snack on them while making his deliveries."

For anyone who grew up in the New Orleans area, the cow jumping over the moon logo for Barbe's is a familiar one. In the early '50s, one morning while Laurent "Larry Sr." was making deliveries on Victory Dr. in Westwego, he noticed a broken baby bed in a trash pile next to the driveway of a home where he was making a delivery. On the head board was mounted a plastic cow jumping over the moon. He was instantly inspired, so he took it out of the trash and decided to make it the dairy's logo. In 1966, a 1200 lb., 20' long and 15' high dairy cow mascot named Betsie Barbé was introduced. She became a fixture in parades. Today, she is still used for grand openings and other events although her parade days are over.

Over time, Laurent and his brother realized their own children did not want to take over the family business so the two brothers made the difficult decision to sell the company to Southern Foods Group out of Dallas, Texas in 1996. Barbe's is now a part of Dean Foods, the largest dairy group in the United States. Laurent, Jr. stayed on as general manager and continued to run Barbe's until 2004 when Dean

Louisiana Agriculture & Forestry Today

Cotton Planting and Boll Weevil Eradication

Baton Rouge, LA (May 23, 2014) – All cotton planted in the state, including cotton grown in ornamental gardens and other non-traditional locations must be registered with the state to be monitored for possible boll weevil presence. State boll weevil eradication law provides that anyone who intends to plant cotton for non-commercial purposes must receive prior permission from the Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry Mike Strain, D.V.M.

“The state is officially boll weevil-free but we must monitor all cotton grown in the state to protect Louisiana’s cotton industry,” Strain said. “Boll weevil traps are set along the edges of cotton fields, but gardeners outside traditional cotton growing areas may plant cotton, for example, to spin their own thread for fabric. Gardeners may also grow cotton for its ornamental appeal. If so, we have to place a boll weevil trap nearby to be sure we preserve our boll weevil-free status.”

Historically, the boll weevil has been cotton’s most destructive pest. All cotton-growing states have eradication programs.

Cotton remains one of Louisiana’s leading crops.

Although only 126,647 acres of cotton were harvested in 2013, record yields were achieved and the total value of the crop was set at almost $148 million.

For more information regarding planting of non-commercial or ornamental cotton, please contact the Louisiana Boll Weevil Eradication Program office at 225-922-1338 or bollweevil@ldaf.state.la.us.

Timber Theft Arrest in Caldwell Parish

Baton Rouge, La., (May 22, 2014) - A Grayson man is accused of stealing timber in Caldwell Parish. Charles Mason Adkins, 37, was arrested Monday by Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) enforcement agents.

Adkins was booked into the Caldwell Parish jail and charged with one count of timber theft valued at more than $13,000.

Investigators say Adkins was legally logging for a Grayson landowner between December 2013 and January 2014. During this time, Adkins reportedly paid for 33 loads of timber. The landowner became suspicious when he received much less money than was promised. Investigators found 11 additional loads of timber at three different mills.

“It was discovered that most of the timber found at these facilities had the landowner’s name on them. These loads were never listed on the paperwork submitted to the landowner,” said LDAF Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M.

The value of this timber was $13,158.73. Adkins was released after posting a $6,000 bond.

Barbe, continued from page 1

Foods decided to merge sister company Brown's Dairy. Now, Laurent serves as general sales manager.

"I feel fortunate to be a part of this company. The Barbé tradition of production and sales continues to thrive through Brown's Dairy." In fact, you still see the cow jumping over the moon logo, Barbe's branding on some packaging and Betsie is still rolling around town.

Fast forward to the spring of 2013, Laurent says he got a call from the Westwego Historical Society about honoring his family's business. He says it was a dream come true. "Just like our cow jumping over the moon logo, I felt like I was over the moon to have us recognized in such a special and permanent way. Our family was quite proud and our father would have been ecstatic."

Now, the Westwego Historical Museum houses a display in honor of Barbe's Dairy, which was the oldest established family business in the city of Westwego. Besides the display, they also honored them with the official Christmas ornament for 2013 featuring Barbe's Dairy which can be purchased at the museum.

The display can be viewed at the Westwego Historical Museum located at 275 Sala Avenue in Westwego.

Dry fall, cold winter shortened crawfish season

By Johnny Morgan
LSU AgCenter

BATON ROUGE, La. – When fall weather is dry, and winter is as cold and as long as it was this year, the combination spells problems for the crawfish industry.

That scenario put this year's season about one month behind, said LSU AgCenter aquaculture researcher Robert Romaine.

"When you get behind, it's really hard to catch up," Romaine said. "We lost a month of growing this season due to weather."

Because crawfish growth is temperature-dependent, those months from November through February are important to size and availability.

"It was cold longer this year than we usually expect," Romaine said.

LSU AgCenter aquaculture researcher Ray McClain, who studies crawfish at the Rice Research Station near Crowley, said this has definitely been an atypical year for pond-raised crawfish.

"Some crawfish are still being harvested, and as is typical, harvesting will continue in those ponds that are catching as long as it is profitable," McClain said.

The recent dry spell has caused some crawfish farmers to end their seasons, while others are looking toward the Atchafalaya Basin for the wild crop that comes in this time of the year.

"It's possible that a period of cool, rainy weather could prolong the season some," McClain said. But hot, dry weather spells the end of this year's pond crop.

LSU AgCenter and Sea Grant specialist Greg Lutz said years ago nobody really expected to find boiled crawfish during winter, but now, if you don't mind the size, you can find boiled crawfish during the colder months.

"It's a matter of economics," Lutz said. "If the farmer can justify going out to run the traps, and he can get a good enough price, he will get crawfish."

When the weather cooperates in the fall, it is possible to find boiled crawfish as early as Thanksgiving, which was unheard of just 10 years ago, Romaine said.

"During the past decade, people have been demanding and getting crawfish around Thanksgiving, but it hasn't always been so," Romaine said. "You didn't expect to get them until around March."

Normally, the crawfish season would be down to the last few weeks by now, Lutz said. "But with the season starting off slower and the wild catch just now really coming in, crawfish could be available for several more weeks before they start burrowing for the summer."

One of the problems encountered by crawfish farmers when the season starts slow is many are actually rice farmers first and crawfish farmers second, Romaine said. "When it's time to plant rice, they can't wait."

Lutz said the crawfish know what they are supposed to do and when they are supposed to do it.

"These crawfish have been doing this for hundreds of millions of years. When the days start to get longer and the water starts to get warmer, they know that summer is coming soon, so they've got to go find a place to spend the summer, and they'll start burrowing down," Lutz said.

The researchers agree that the wild crawfish coming in now are about the same quality as pond-raised were in March.

Horse owners must prepare for storm possibilities

By Bruce Schultz
LSU AgCenter

BATON ROUGE, La. – Horse owners should prepare for tropical weather instead of waiting until the last minute just before a storm, advised LSU AgCenter equine specialist Neely Walker.

"Planning is the key to keeping your horses safe," she said.

Planning can be done with neighbors and surrounding farm owners to identify resources in the area. "This includes evacuation routes, stables, feed availability and emergency kits," she said.

Waiting until an evacuation is not the time to get a horse accustomed to entering a horse trailer, Walker said, and she recommended practicing that procedure. Also, vaccines should be current.

"If you are planning on evacuating with your horse, leave early enough to prevent traffic delays," she said. "Keep in mind that during evacuation, management practices may change, so monitor your horses closely for dehydration and signs of intestinal distress."

If the decision is made not to evacuate, Walker recommends:

- A minimum of two weeks supply of hay and feed stored in waterproof containers kept in the highest and driest area possible.

- At least 10 gallons of water per horse per day. Plastic barrels with secure lids can be filled and kept near animals.

- Preparing an emergency barn kit and keeping it in a secure location with a light and batteries, rope, chain saw with fuel and oil, handsaw, nails, screws, spray paint and fencing materials.

ing a storm.

- Removing possible hazards from an area where horses will be kept. If outside, allow horses access to higher ground.

"If you are not prepared, being displaced is difficult to manage," Walker said. "You may be able to get back to your property, but it may not be safe for weeks."

- Notifying neighbors and family where you will be during the storm.

- Compiling records for each animal, including a photo of each horse with a family member, medical documents, tattoos, microchip information, brands, scars and any other permanent identification, owner information and your veterinarian's contact information. The records should be kept in a secure location that can be accessed after a storm. Consideration should be given to sending the material to a friend in a location not expected to be affected by a weather event.

- Attaching identification to all horses, including fetlock identification tags and halter tags. Telephone numbers can be spray-painted on a horse, and a waterproof bag containing owner information can be tied to a horse's mane.

- Providing hay and water during a storm.
