Three to be inducted into Louisiana Ag Hall of Distinction

By Kenneth Gautreaux
LSU AgCenter

Three fixtures in Louisiana agriculture will be inducted into the Louisiana Agriculture Hall of Distinction during a ceremony at L'Auberge Hotel in Baton Rouge on March 4.

The new inductees are former Louisiana Farm Bureau President Ronnie Anderson, of Ethel; sugarcane farmer John Gay, of Plaquemine; and Paul "Jackie" Loewer, of Branch, a rice farmer who has been a strong advocate for the rice industry in state and national organizations.

A joint effort of the LSU AgCenter, Louisiana

Radio Network, Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation and Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry, the Louisiana Agriculture Hall of Distinction honors individuals who have made significant contributions to agriculture or agriculture-related industries. Previous inductees have represented farming, ranching, forestry, aquaculture, education and agribusiness.

Anderson started his agricultural career in the dairy industry and transitioned to beef cattle. He has a herd of about 400 cattle, and he raises horses, hay and timber in both East Feliciana and West Feliciana parishes.

One of Anderson's biggest contributions to agriculture is his tenure as Louisiana state president of Farm Bureau. He served 31 years and helped grow the organization from 67,000 members to nearly 150,000 today.

He received many awards throughout his career, including being named Man of the Year in Louisiana Agriculture by Progressive Farmer Magazine and induction into the LSU Alumni Hall of Distinction.

Gay farms more than 4,500 acres in Iberville Parish. His family has been involved in sugarcane for seven generations. Nearly every generation has held the highest level of leadership in the Louisiana sugarcane industry.

Gay is a practitioner of on-farm research at St. Louis Planting Company, the family farm. His work in fertility, drainage, erosion control and weed management have paid dividends for the state's sugar industry. Twice during the past decade, Gay's farm has produced more than 10,000 pounds of sugar per acre.

Variety research is considered by many in the sugarcane community as being the "lifeblood of the industry." Gay has participated in variety trials on his farm, and the Gay family has funded a professorship at the LSU AgCenter Sugar Research Station devoted to this effort.

Loewer has dedicated much of his career to helping the Louisiana and national rice industry maintain a sound foundation. He has played a significant role in the development of several national farm bills.

Loewer played an integral role with the Louisiana Rice Research Board, serving for 26 years, including 12 years as chairman. The board funds research initiatives aimed at increasing the sustainability of Louisiana's rice farmers. His advocacy for the rice checkoff program has helped fund these efforts.

Loewer has been a member of several national rice boards. He was a chairman of the USA Rice Farmers Board and chairman of the USA Rice Federation, which is considered one of the highest positions a U.S. rice farmer can achieve.

For more information regarding the Louisiana Agriculture Hall of Distinction event, contact Don Molino with the Louisiana Radio Network at 225-291-2727, ext. 210 or don@louisianaradionetwork.com.

LOUISIANA AGRICULTURE & FORESTRY TODAY

Strain: Time to Document Ag Losses

Baton Rouge, La. (February 18, 2021) – Louisiana Commissioner of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) Mike Strain, D.V.M., is urging all agricultural producers impacted by the severe winter weather to document losses.

“While no secretarial disaster designation has been declared at this time, an accurate account of any crops and livestock that are lost is vital in the event insurance claims are necessary or federal assistance through the U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) is made available,” said Strain.

Documentation includes: photos and videos of losses, purchase records, production records, vaccination records, bank or other loan documents and third-party certification.

The Farm Service Agency (FSA) has a variety of loans available including emergency loans that are triggered by disaster declarations and operating loans that can assist producers.

Producers who signed up for Federal Crop Insurance or the Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP) and who suffer losses are asked to report crop damage to their crop insurance agent or local FSA office within 72 hours of damage discovery and follow up in writing within 15 days.

Livestock and perennial crop producers often have more limited risk management options available, but there are disaster programs available to them. Key programs include the Livestock Indemnity Program and Emergency Assistance for Livestock which reimburse producers for a portion of the value of their livestock, poultry and other animals.

The Tree Assistance Program provides cost share assistance to rehabilitate or replant and clean-up damage to trees, vines or shrubs. To learn more about USDA disaster assistance programs, contact your local FSA office.

Not so fast! Hold off on pruning those freeze-damaged plants

By Heather Kirk-Ballard
LSU AgCenter Horticulturist

(02/19/21) The entire state of Louisiana, along with many others, just got an unusual dose of ice, sleet and snow. Despite our valiant efforts to cover and protect plants, some will still be lost to the recent hard freezes.

As the temperatures warm up, it will take several days — maybe weeks — to fully understand the damage this cold weather event has caused. So hold off on the pruning for now. When plants begin their new spring growth, you will be better able to see what damage occurred in the freezes, and pruning will be much more efficient.

Don't go pulling anything out of the ground yet, either. Many of our cool-season annuals will probably be OK. They are much more cold hardy than other annuals. Violas, pansies, dianthus, foxglove and clematis are alive and will likely bloom again in the spring.

Roots of most hardy plants will be OK, too. With all of the rain that followed the cold snap, our soil is wet, providing protection against freezing temperatures. Even though many of the plants are frozen up top, they are still alive beneath the soil. Rest assured that these plants will return from their roots.

Tender tropical plants melted like the Wicked Witch of the West from Oz. Still, do not be too hasty to get out there and prune. If you are fortunate enough that your tropical plants survived, it's best to leave the mushy foliage to help protect the crown of the plant.

You may be wondering how to protect your landscape from freeze damage in the future. First, it helps to understand some terminology:

— Tender plants are those that die in freezing winter temperatures. These include herbaceous, tropical and sub-tropical plants.

— Hardy plants can survive our typical winter temperatures. These include most woody trees and shrubs. They are reliably hardy in freezing temperatures and do not typically die.

— Many perennial plants are root hardy, meaning they will return from their roots, crown or other underground parts such as bulbs or tubers.

It is good to know what plants can hold up to before adding them to your landscape. Selections should be hardy enough to survive freezing temperatures below what is normal for your area and tough enough to stand up to our severe summer heat.

The USDA hardiness zone map can help you decide which plants to choose. This map divides the United States and southern Canada into 13 planting zones, with a 10-degree Fahrenheit difference in the average annual minimum temperature between each zone. The higher the zone number, the warmer those temperatures.

For better accuracy, the zones are further broken down into A and B levels, both representing a 5-degree difference, with A being colder than B.

The spectrum ranges from zone 1 in Alaska to zones 12 and 13 in Hawaii and Puerto Rico. Most of the United States lies in planting zones 4 to 8.

Cool-season annuals such as pansies and dianthus will likely thaw from the freeze and bloom again in the spring. Photo by Bob Mirabello/LSU AgCenter

Tender tropical plants such as split leaf philodendron will likely look like mush after thawing from a hard freeze. Don't rush to prune until spring. Photo by Bob Mirabello/LSU AgCenter

Dwarf bottlebrush is cold hardy in USDA hardiness zones 8 to 11. It will likely sustain some damage from the freeze. Photo by Bob Mirabello/LSU AgCenter

Louisiana falls into zones 8 and 9. The north is zone 8a, where average minimum temperatures are 10 to 15 degrees. Central and southern Louisiana are in zone 8b, and average minimum temperatures are 15 to 20 degrees. Coastal areas in zone 9a have average minimum temperatures of 20 to 25 degrees, and the southernmost part of the state is in zone 9b, with average minimum temperatures of 25 to 30 degrees.

The packaging of seeds and plants sold at nurseries and garden centers often indicates the hardiness zones in which they can be grown. For example, a plant marked for zones 5 to 9 means the farthest north it can be grown is in zone 5. It would suffer or die in a colder zone.

A plant is considered hardy if it can tolerate lower temperatures than your area typically receives. Our local nurseries carry many plants that tolerate our low temperatures.

If possible, choose plants that are hardy at least one zone north of where you live. For example, if you live in zone 8, choose plants hardy to zone 7. This gives you a leg up in the event of an unseasonably cold winter.
