LOUISIANA DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE & FORESTRY
MIKE STRAIN DVM, COMMISSIONER

Louisiana is in the peak of rice planting season and Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., is reminding farmers that all rice for the planting of seed rice, commercial production and crawfish, are required to be tested.

The testing requirement is the result of a U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) finding in 2006 in which trace amounts of a genetically modified trait, LibertyLink 601 (LLtraits), was discovered in the U.S. rice supply. While the USDA concluded that no human health, food safety, or environmental concerns were associated with the genetically modified rice, marketing such rice was difficult. When rice importing countries expressed concerns about genetically modified rice, the European Union (EU) stated that countries in the EU would not buy rice contaminated with LL traits.

"Maintaining markets for Louisiana rice is vital to both Louisiana's rice industry and to Louisiana's overall economy. The embargo by the EU and the threat of an embargo by other rice importing countries created harm to Louisiana's economy," added Strain.

In order to avoid any embargo of U.S. rice originating from Louisiana, in 2007 the LDAF Seed Commission passed regulations requiring the testing of all seed rice, regardless of planting purpose, for the LL 601 gene. Those regulations remain in place today.

LDAF samples and tests approximately 100 rice samples annually from Louisiana rice and crawfish producers.

The initial contaminated rice was purged from the rice supplies, and the U.S. rice industry has remained LL 601 gene free for over a decade as a result of the sampling and testing requirements.

For additional information, or to request a sample collection, producers should contact the LDAF Seed Programs Division by phone at 225-925-4733 or by email at seed@ldaf.state.la.us.

Suspect arrested for setting fires to eliminate snakes

Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) investigators have arrested one suspect and are looking for another accused of setting multiple fires near and in a wooded area in Leesville, La.

Thirty-four year old Laura Ashley Lee, 252 Lee Rd., Leesville, La., was arrested March 18, 2021 for one count of simple arson.

Thirty-four year old Robert Lee Ramirez, 252 Lee Rd., Leesville, La., remains at large.

Investigators said Ramirez set multiple fires from the roadside as well as in wooded areas surrounding their home on land owned by others. Information obtained during the investigation revealed the reason for setting the fires was to get rid of snakes near the property.

Investigators also reportedly learned Ramirez set multiple fires in the same area in 2020. Ramirez is accused of two counts of simple arson and remains at large. Lee's bond was set at $3,500. She posted bond the same day. If convicted, the suspects could face a fine and/or jail time.

Anyone with information is asked to call the LDAF Fire Hotline at 855-452-5323.

PARMESAN GRILLED CORN

Submitted by Slap Ya Mama

Ingredients:

- 4 ears of corn, shucked
- ½ cup parmesan cheese, shredded
- 4 tablespoons unsalted butter, melted
- ½ teaspoon dried thyme
- 1 tablespoon Slap Ya Mama Original Blend Seasoning
- 1 tablespoon parsley, chopped

Instructions:

Preheat grill to 400 degrees F. In a bowl, combine ¼ cup parmesan cheese, butter, thyme and Slap Ya Mama Original Blend Seasoning. Mix well and set aside. Using a large sheet of foil, create a tray for the corncobs to sit in. Lay corn flat inside foil tray. Coat corn with the butter mixture, making sure the corn is entirely covered. Using the foil tray and more foil, tightly wrap corn into a foil pack, making sure there are no holes in the foil pack. Place foil pack on grill and cook for 35 to 40 minutes or until corn is fully cooked. Carefully open foil pack, sprinkle remaining parmesan cheese over the corn and top with chopped parsley. Serve and enjoy!

Did you know?

If you have ever purchased fuel containing water or other contaminants, you already know bad fuel can damage your car and is costly to repair.

LDAF's Weights and Measures division is responsible for ensuring the fuel you purchase is free of contaminants and meets certain quality standards through routine inspections of fuel station pumps.

In the event you have a fuel quality issue, the division also investigates complaints. The division receives between 350-400 fuel quality complaints annually.

When a fuel quality complaint is filed, samples are taken and processed at our in-house motor fuels lab in Baton Rouge. The testing tells us if the motor fuel is contaminated with water or foreign matter and if other quality standards are met.

There are also steps you, the consumer can take to protect yourself in the event you have a fuel quality issue.

- Pay with a credit card, when possible, and be sure to save the receipt. The credit card company can provide a transaction record if the receipt is misplaced. If you do pay with cash, always get a receipt for fuel purchases. In the event of water contamination, or substandard fuel issues, these transaction records will help in the process of trying to recoup repair costs to your vehicle from the retailer.
- Be aware of which fuel type your vehicle requires; this can usually be found in the vehicle owner's manual.
- Pay attention to signage at the pump to verify you are putting the correct fuel in your vehicle. Ask store personnel for clarification if you are not sure what is being offered for sale at the location.
- Report any fuel quality issues to LDAF, via the fuel hotline at 1-800-247-1086, as quickly as possible.

Prescribed burns, pests, taxes featured at virtual forestry forum

By Bruce Schultz
LSU AgCenter

Forestry professionals attending the online LSU AgCenter 2021 Forestry Forum on Tuesday heard presentations about a wide range of topics, including estate and tax law, the basics of prescribed burns, controlling a pervasive wild plant, possible tax increases, forestry economics and selling timber.

Video presentations from the sessions will be available later for participants who registered for the events.

Niels de Hoop, LSU AgCenter forestry professor, said prescribed burning was a practice of Native Americans. He said the technique is good for wildlife and improves grazing conditions by decreasing the amount of understory on the forest floor.

De Hoop conducts prescribed burn classes, and he said 1,257 people have been certified for forest prescribed burns. In addition, 1,386 have been certified for conducting agricultural burns and 269 have been certified for burning marsh.

He said a certified prescribed burner who follows the proper guidelines is presumed to be non-negligent under Louisiana law (Revised Statute 3:17), but with a caveat. "This law has never been tested in court."

Lucas Stamper, LSU AgCenter natural resource agent, talked about controlling a weedy shrub called baccharis. He said it grows 10 to 12 feet and outcompetes hardwood tree species, often creating a monoculture. It competes for space, nutrients and sunlight in bottomland hardwoods.

Because the plant is semi-evergreen, a study has shown it can be controlled with the herbicide triclopyr in the winter without significant damage to hardwood trees, Stamper said. However, the herbicide has not been labeled for use by the manufacturer, so spraying the material on private land is not legal.

and Forestry professor, gave an overview of timber economics. He said lumber prices have jumped 188% since 2020.

Holley said during the pandemic, more people started building homes and home improvement projects, increasing demand. Speculators also played a role in the price jump, he said.

At the same time, he said, the overabundance of timber has meant landowners have not benefitted from those higher prices. But Holley said he's optimistic the market will improve.

Buck Vandersteen, executive director of the Louisiana Forestry Association, said he expects more facilities will be coming to Louisiana to process timber products, but existing facilities have been expanded. He said wood processors have started new operations in Mississippi and Arkansas. "I believe we will soon see some exciting new mills coming to Louisiana."

Vandersteen warned that a $5-per-acre fee on timberland may be brought up in the state Legislature this year.

He also said downed timber from last year's hurricanes could fuel major wildfires.

Attorney Paul Spillers provided information on taxation and estate laws. He said current federal inheritance taxes only apply for estates exceeding $11 million. He said the Louisiana inheritance tax has been repealed.

Spillers provided details for landowners to save money on capital gains taxes.

Forestry consultant Tim Holland, of Shreveport, provided information on selling timber. He advised making sure a buyer is a member of a professional timber organization, such as the Society of American Foresters. "You want a good, reputable forester who is a member of one of these organizations."
