CERTIFIABLY GREAT GIFTS!

By Cori Webre

For so many reasons, there is more excitement and anticipation for this holiday season than ever before. Holiday parties, family gatherings, Friends-givings, community festivities – you name it, it's happening...and we want to do it ALL!

Can you guess what the one common denominator is in all these gatherings? If you guessed FOOD, then you're our kind of celebrator! That's right – it's all about the food. When you live in the food mecca that is Louisiana, that's exactly how it should be.

Our great state's extraordinary food culture is known across the world – and one major reason for that is the huge variety of local products created and produced by Louisiana locals who provide delectable fare that can't be found anywhere else.

Whether shopping for your next feast or looking for great gift ideas, look for the Certified Louisiana seal. When a product has the official seal of approval on its label, that means it was grown, caught, manufactured, and distributed right here in Louisiana.

Look for labels with Certified Louisiana, Certified Cajun, Certified Creole, Certified Farm-to-Table, or Certified Craft Beverage in grocery stores, farmers' markets and restaurants. When you purchase a product with one of these logos, you're supporting Louisiana families and businesses and helping the local economy.

If you don't see certified products or if there is a particular product you can't find, simply ask your local grocery store to start carrying it so that they know their customers value local products.

It's more important than ever to support the hardworking locals who provide so many outstanding products that help make our food culture so unique. Make this a "certified" holiday season by checking labels and buying Certified Louisiana first to keep your dollars right here at home. Great for the economy and for your tastebuds!

So this holiday season, keep it real and look for the seal. Learn more by visiting CertifiedLouisiana.org and following us on Facebook and Instagram. Happy eating and have a certifiably wonderful holiday!

Lacassine Rice Mill Groundbreaking Ceremony

Baton Rouge, La. (November 21, 2021) -- Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., spoke at a recent ceremony to break ground on a new and highly anticipated rice mill in Lacassine, Louisiana. This new construction was made possible through the partnership between South Louisiana Rail Facility and Agreeta USA as well as support from the

Jeff Davis Parish Police Jury, Jeff Davis Parish Office of Economic Development, Louisiana Economic Development (LED), Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF), Louisiana Agriculture Finance Authority (LAFA), and 200 local farmers. The new rice mill represents a major international and agricultural win for Louisiana. Commissioner Strain said, "Rice is one of the largest agricultural crops in Louisiana. An opportunity such as this to add value to that product and ship it across the world will bring economic benefits for generations to come." The South Louisiana Rail Facility represents many local producers and investors. The new facility will help Louisiana farmers market rough rice internationally for more competitive prices.

"The United States of America is one of the few countries that will sell either milled or rough rice," said Strain. "So we are in a perfect position. A lot of countries want our milled rice and we can get a better price for it. At the end of the day what this means is more dollars in the pockets of our farmers." CHICKEN & SAUSAGE JAMBALAYA

Submitted by SoLA

Ingredients:

- 2 tablespoon extra-virgin olive oil
- 1 pound boneless, skinless chicken thighs or breasts, cut into pieces
- 2 14 ounce package smoked link sausage, cut into ¼ inch slices
- 1 large onion, chopped
- 2 celery ribs, diced
- 1 bell pepper, diced
- 2 tablespoons SoLa Cajun Seasoning
- 1 ½ cups long grain rice
- 1 14 ounce can diced tomatoes, with juice
- 2 cups chicken broth or stock
- ½ cup green onions, chopped

Instructions:

Using a large, heavy pot on the stove, brown chicken in olive oil at medium-high heat until lightly browned. Remove chicken from pot and pat dry. Cook sausage in same pot until lightly brown and remove. Add onion, celery, and bell pepper and cook, stirring for about 5 minutes until onions are tender. Add chicken, sausage, rice, tomatoes with juice, broth and SoLa Cajun Seasoning. Bring to a boil and lower heat to medium-low. Cook covered for 25-30 or until rice is tender. Serve with chopped green onions, if desired.

DOUBLE “J” CAJUN FRIED CATFISH STRIPS

Submitted by Guidry’s Catfish, Inc.

Ingredients:

- 4 pounds U.S. Farm-Raised catfish strips
- ⅛ cup prepared yellow mustard
- 1½ teaspoon salt
- 1 teaspoon black pepper
- 1½ cayenne pepper
- 2 teaspoons onion powder
- 2 teaspoons garlic powder
- Peanut oil for frying
- 1 pound Guidry’s Fish Fry

Instructions:

Preheat oil in deep fryer to 350 degrees F. Prepare a pan or baking sheet by placing several layers of either paper towels or brown paper bags in it (used to absorb the excess oil after frying). Place all spices in a small mixing bowl. Mix thoroughly. Place catfish in a large mixing bowl. Coat the catfish with the mustard, then sprinkle the coated fish with the spice blend, making sure to evenly coat all pieces of fish. Pour fish fry into another mixing bowl or deep pan. Place the coated fish into the bowl containing the fish fry. Roll the catfish strips in the fish fry until well coated. Place catfish strips into hot oil and cook until the strips float to the top and are a golden brown. Remove from the fryer and drain. Place fish in pan that has been prepared with several layers of paper towels or brown paper bag to remove any excess oil. Serve with Guidry’s Original or Jalapeno hushpuppies and French fries or coleslaw. C’est Bon!

How does your garden grow?

LSU students plant, harvest small plots in the heart of campus

By George Morris,
Advocate Staff Writer

LSU student Benjamin Pierrotti wants to be an entrepreneur. But when the chance came to have his own little garden, he couldn't wait to get his hands in the dirt.

Neither could about two dozen other students who are now harvesting vegetables from small plots right in the heart of the campus.

That delights the staff at LSU's tiny Hill Farm.

Now only a sliver of what was once a 40-acre research facility, Hill Farm used a Student Government grant to provide raised garden beds and invited students to grow their own vegetables and herbs starting this semester.

The 20 beds were quickly snapped up, and two more have been added.

"In today's society, especially in the city, people don't get enough out in nature," said Pierrotti, a sophomore from Lafayette, as he showed off his plot of kale, broccoli, cauliflower, cabbage and parsley. "This was a way I could get out."

Pierrotti learned about the gardening opportunity because he took an agronomy elective taught by Katherine "Kiki" Fontenot, an associate professor in the LSU AgCenter School of Plant, Environmental and Soil Sciences. Fontenot came up with the idea for the garden and oversees it along with professor Ed Bush. The two of them set up the beds, including soil and drip irrigation, and provided plants or seeds for planting in early October.

Students can go to the garden 24 hours a day. For some, that means night visits to weed, fertilize and harvest because that's the only time they have available.

The students can continue gardening in their spots as long as they are registered LSU students and keep their gardens tidy. New students will be invited to grab a plot as the current gardeners drop out or if the project receives funding to expand, Fontenot said.

The LSU Horticulture Club has two beds to grow food as well as plants to attract bees for pollination. An education professor has beds to show future teachers how to use gardens as lessons.

Evan and Mollie Davies, married graduate students in entomology, come three days a week, usually on their lunch breaks to tend their plants. They live in an apartment, so having their own garden would otherwise be impossible.

"It's nice to grow fresh produce, work with your hands, dig with your hands," said Evan Davies, who grows green beans, lavender, broccoli, cabbage, kale, oak leaf lettuce, carrots and dill. "It's something else to do to get your mind off school."

"Graduate school can be a little bit demanding," Mollie Davies added. "We're going to graduate in May, so we have a lot of experiments to do, a lot of stuff going on. This is nice. It's an experiment of its own, but it's nice to take your mind off of that (class work)."

The couple and others who garden can pop in midday because, though it's mostly hidden from roadways, Hill Farm is close by. Just behind the Lod Cook Hotel, the location has been a blessing and a curse.

Its connection to LSU's agricultural mission began when the campus moved to its current site in the 1920s. When a swamp was dredged to form University Lake in 1930, that material was added to the land, creating research space that stretched from Highland Road to the lake.

But in the 1960s as the campus grew, large tracks of the farm were given to the university for fraternity and sorority houses. In the following decades, more of the land was taken to build the LSU Systems Building, Recreation Sports Complex and the Lod Cook Conference Center and Hotel. The remaining land has been devoted to horticulture education.

"All of this is teaching. That's the best part," Bush said. "It's horticulture awareness for the future."

"Selfishly," Fontenot added, "the point also for Ed and I, maybe ... we can get some of these kids to take a horticulture class or consider this as a career path. When legislation comes up and they're adults and they're lawyers or doctors or teachers and they hear something about agriculture, they understand the importance of it to themselves, so maybe they vote in favor of it."

The students who garden, all from various academic majors, have bonded over their shared interest, and held a dinner in the garden on Nov. 11. Fontenot and Bush provided entrees, and the students brought side dishes, some made from the vegetables and herbs they are growing.

Some of the students see a long-term benefit for the garden.

"In the future when I have my own home, if I would like to grow these instead of going to the store, I can," Pierrotti said. "It also teaches my kids. ... It gets you out of the classroom and gets you in enjoyable touch with nature."

Keep your pets healthy and safe during the holidays

By LSU School of Veterinary Medicine's Tales of the Tails

Holidays bring families and friends together, but they can also mean potential hazards for pets. Table food, ornaments, and other holiday items can be harmful and sometimes fatal to cats and dogs. Every year veterinarians at the LSU Veterinary Teaching Hospital see an increase in a variety of digestive maladies during the holiday season.

Potential holiday hazards:

Chocolate

The holidays are a great time to cook with and enjoy chocolate; however, chocolate is very toxic to pets and can cause gastrointestinal, cardiovascular and neurological symptoms, including vomiting, rapid heart rate, high blood pressure, being over excited, and seizures. If you think your dog may have ingested chocolate, signs to watch for include vomiting, diarrhea, lethargy, agitation, increased thirst, an elevated heart rate and in severe cases, seizures.

Cords and Batteries

Many decorations involve electrical cords. Check to make sure that your pets are not chewing on them, as electric shock may have devastating consequences. Also, some pets may try to eat batteries, so please make sure that they are put away safely.

Wraps, Foil, Ribbons, Small Parts

Candy wrappers, aluminum foil, plastic wrap, or ribbons can lead to serious problems if eaten by dogs or cats. Tinsel is particularly enticing to cats. Please be mindful about your cats chewing on and swallowing tinsel. When ingested in sufficient quantities, it binds into a rope that can cause severe intestinal obstruction and require surgical treatment. Further, any small decoration or toy poses a swallowing hazard. If a child can choke on small toys or toy parts, then so can the family dog or cat.

Table Food, Ornamental Plants

Table food can cause dogs to suffer from acute gastroenteritis

(an inflammation of the stomach and intestines) or pancreatitis. In both diseases, dogs experience severe vomiting, diarrhea, abdominal pain, and listlessness. Bones may lead to obstructions in the esophagus, the stomach, or the intestine and lead to severe digestive signs. Furthermore, grapes, raisins, and onions are foods that dogs and cats should not eat. They are toxic to pets and can cause potentially fatal diseases, such as acute kidney failure, anemia, or seizures. Most ornamental plants, for example, poinsettias, mistletoe, and holly, can cause stomach upset.

Cold Weather

The weather in December and January can be quite chilly even in Louisiana. So, please bring your pets inside overnight when temperatures dip toward freezing temperatures.

What To Do

If your pet becomes sick or if you think that it may have ingested something harmful, contact your veterinarian immediately. Delays in seeking veterinary help may seriously complicate the problem. If your pet requires medical care after-hours, you can bring your pet to the LSU Veterinary Teaching Hospital on Skip Bertman Drive. The hospital is open 24 hours a day, seven days a week, 365 days a year and remains open even during holidays. Please call 225-578-9600 or go to www.lsu.edu/vetmed for more information about the Veterinary Teaching Hospital.

Prescribed Burning School set for April 28-30, 2022

The LA Ecological Forestry Center (LEAF), the SW LA Forestry Association, the LSU AgCenter, the LA Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF), and the LA Department of Wildlife & Fisheries (LDWF) will be having a school to enable forest landowners to burn their lands safely and legally.

Topics will include fuels, burning techniques, proper tools, optimal weather conditions, smoke management, liability management, planning, fire behavior and more. Times are Thursday & Friday 8:00 a.m. to 4:30 p.m., Saturday 8:00 a.m. to 12:00 p.m.

This training will begin the process of becoming LA Certified Burn Manager. The completion of five prescribed fires and their documentation will complete the process. The cost is $100. Class size is limited to the first 25 applicants. Please make check payable to SW LA Forestry Association, and send to LSU AgCenter, PO Box 609, DeRidder, LA 70634. For questions, please call 337-463-7006 or email khawkins@agcenter.lsu.edu.

Support local businesses with gift boxes from AgCenter Food Innovation Institute

By Olivia McClure

(12/2/21) BATON ROUGE, La. — With the holiday season here, the LSU AgCenter Food Innovation Institute is now selling gift boxes featuring an array of tasty local products.

Each box contains a variety of snacks, condiments and other unique items made by tenants at FOODii, which provides entrepreneurial and nutritional expertise to startup food businesses.

Four options are available, including a deluxe box that costs $80. There also are three smaller boxes for $40 apiece: a Hanley's Foods salad-themed box, a happy hour box and a box filled with sweet treats.

"These boxes make great gifts, and they also are a great way to support Louisiana businesses," said Gaye Sandoz, FOODii director. "The proceeds help them sell more products and allow FOODii to continue to provide resources to these local food companies."

Orders must be placed online at store.lsuagcenter.com by Dec. 17. Allow five business days after ordering for processing.

Boxes can be shipped, or customers can pick them up at the FOODii bottling line located at the intersection of West Parker Boulevard and Gourrier Avenue on the LSU campus. Call 225-252-7162 to arrange pickup.

The bottling facility will be open for order pickup Nov. 22 and 23, then again from Nov. 29 to Dec. 17 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. Only checks will be accepted for payment.

For more information, call 225-578-3713.
