Merry Christmas

Please mail this Market Bulletin to:

This is the time of year when many of us get to slow down and reflect on the importance of the holiday season, what it means to us and what we are grateful for. Most importantly, this is the time when family, friends and other loved ones make a special effort to be together and share the joys of the season.

Some of our agricultural producers, especially those who were impacted by Hurricane Isaac, have had a rough few months. Remember, it is the farmer, the rancher, the forester and the fisher who provide sustenance for us. Let's keep them in our thoughts and prayers as we gather for the holidays. May they find the strength to recover from adversity and continue to flourish.

For me, I am grateful to be your commissioner. It is a job that is most rewarding, mainly because of the wonderful people I am able to work with and serve each and every day. What greater charge can there be than to promote those who feed, clothe, shelter, and protect our families, friends and neighbors.

I am personally thankful to each of you for doing your jobs so well.

Susan and I thank you for your friendship and support, and may God bless you one and all!

Louisiana Agriculture & Forestry Today

Strain urges Corps not to lower river levels

Baton Rouge, La. (November 27, 2012) – Commissioner Mike Strain, D.V.M., Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF), sent a letter to the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, the Louisiana congressional delegation and federal leaders urging that the Corps not reduce water flow from a reservoir into the Missouri River which flows into the Mississippi River near St. Louis, Mo.

This action is normally taken by the Corps to prepare for ice buildup and flooding during the winter months.

“Low river levels already exist because of the widespread drought. Reducing water flow would only exacerbate the situation. Barges carrying grain and other products will not be able to navigate the Mississippi if water levels drop even lower,” said Strain. “In December and January alone, $7 billion in product is expected to travel up and down this waterway. The ports in south Louisiana are dependent upon this cargo,” Strain added.

In recent weeks, Strain has taken to the radio airwaves to discuss this issue and has reached out to the congressional delegation and fellow commissioners of agriculture to get support on maintaining river levels.

“It is critical that the President take immediate action to ensure grain and other products can be moved to maintain this economic lifeline. There is a growing demand for our products, and if farmers are unable to ship their commodities, it will ultimately lead to higher prices for the consumer. That’s the last thing families need right now,” added Strain.

Farmer of the Year nominations due Jan. 4

Nominations for the 2013 Louisiana Farmer of the Year award are being accepted now through Jan. 4. Application forms can be obtained at any LSU AgCenter parish extension office or online at www.LSUAgCenter.com/farmeroftheyear.

“While much of the country suffered through drought, our farmers were able to help fill in the gap by producing exceptional crops including a record yield for soybeans,” said LSU AgCenter Chancellor Bill Richardson. “Louisiana agriculture continues to play an essential economic role in the state and local economies.”

Other sponsors of the competition include the Louisiana

Radio Network, Louisiana Farm Bureau Federation and the Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry. Producers from all areas of agriculture are eligible to enter.

Three finalists will be recognized at White Oak Plantation in Baton Rouge on Feb. 28, 2013, with the winner receiving a cash award and other prizes.

This is the 16th year of presenting the Louisiana Farmer of the Year award. Last year’s winner was Hank Rabb, a cotton and corn farmer from St. Joseph in Tensas Parish.

For more information, contact Don Molino at Louisiana Network at 225-291-2727, ext. 210, or don@louisianaradionetwork.com.

Attention: Baled hay producers, sellers, buyers, shippers

The United States Department of Agriculture’s (USDA) Animal and Plant Health Inspection Service (APHIS) regulates the movement of hay out of areas under quarantine for the imported fire ant. The quarantine zone includes most of the southeastern U.S. including Louisiana.

In quarantine areas like Louisiana, USDA only regulates baled hay and baled straw that are stored in direct contact with the ground since it poses a risk for harboring imported fire ants. This hay can move anywhere within the quarantine area but can only move outside of the quarantine area when certain conditions are met.

Baled hay that meets any of the requirements below is not regulated and has no movement restrictions:

- For baled hay that is stacked, all bales except the bottom layer that is in direct contact with the ground.

- Hay that is cut, baled, loaded, and shipped without storage.

- Baled hay that is stored on an impervious surface such as hardpan (highly compressed soil), asphalt, concrete, etc.

- Baled hay that is stored elevated above the soil on pallets or tires or stored on landscaping cloth placed over the soil.

Louisiana Department of Agriculture and Forestry (LDAF) officials recommend anyone shipping hay outside of Louisiana contact agriculture officials in the destination state before transporting hay.

For additional information, contact the LDAF Horticulture and Quarantine Division at 225-952-8100 or visit

Have you sold cattle on the farm?

The beef check-off law goes into effect every time cattle are sold. This includes purebred sales and private treaty sales on the farm. The law requires that you must collect the national, plus the 50 cents state check-off money during your sale. The 50 cents state check-off is now a Mandatory Collection as a result of Act 298 passed in the 1995 Louisiana legislature, but producers may request a refund of this amount only, by written request to the Louisiana Beef Industry Council.

The seller is also responsible under the law. The seller may collect and remit the $1.50 per head in a private treaty transaction. This is the best way to handle purebred sales. To avoid a late payment charge, money must be remitted by the 15th of the month following the sale. Penalties of up to $5,000 per transaction applies to violators. All sale transactions are subject to audit to insure compliance with the check-off law.

Please use the form below when submitting the collected check-off funds.

What's in a Name?

Meet Reina, Mahala and Kerri. They're not celebrities, but at Kleinpeter Dairy Farm they are certainly part of a very large family.

Jeff Kleinpeter of Kleinpeter Dairy Farm operates on the philosophy that what is best for his cows is best for the customer. LDAF Press Secretary Veronica Mosgrove proudly poses for a photo with little Veronica Moosgrove. Little Veronica was born November 14 at Kleinpeter Dairy Farms.

By Veronica Mosgrove

Marilyn Monroe, Cher, Britney Spears.... Say these names and more than likely people know who you are talking about. While Juliet, Mahala, Sarai, Kerri, Reina, Penny and Aimie are not celebrities, at Kleinpeter Dairy Farm they are certainly part of a very large family.

"How many times in a corporation have you heard, 'I'm just a number.' Guess what – these dairy cows aren't just numbers. They have names and they get treated special here," says owner Jeff Kleinpeter.

While it may be common for small farm owners to name their cows, the size of the Kleinpeter operation does not deter the dairy farm workers from naming their girls. In fact, they're named the day they are born. With approximately 1,200 head of cattle currently on the farm, they've exhausted all of the common cow names over the years and have moved on to Indian, French, Egyptian and Spanish names.

"Reina is Spanish for queen. When little Reina came along, we noticed she was living up to her name. She thinks she's in charge!" says Kleinpeter's dairy farm manager Mike Price.

No question these cows have different personalities. One thing is clear, most are very welcoming of human visitors.

"I believe it's reflective of how we treat our four legged employees," says Kleinpeter. "We try to maintain a very relaxed atmosphere for our cows. It's better for our cows because a less stressed cow produces better milk. Our customers can actually taste the difference."

The Kleinpeter Dairy Farm is the largest dairy farm in Louisiana and sits on 1100 acres in St. Helena Parish. The cows relax on rice hulls which make a soft bedding all for "cow comfort". There are fans and a misting system in the barns. There's even a strategy to breeding. "We don't want our calves to be born in summer months because it's just harder on the mommas," says Kleinpeter as he points out the special maternity barn where the cows are monitored.

"We stand for our principles and what's best for our cows is best for the customer," added Kleinpeter who is a fourth generation dairy farmer. When he took over the farm in 2004, he says he asked himself how he could do things better. "I mean, who wants to be associated with a lack of quality? We should be working toward higher standards because we're a Louisiana company and we need to represent the state well."

Kleinpeter says those standards are always changing and they're always looking for ways to improve. In recent years, those higher standards have resulted in perfect ratings from the American Humane Association (AHA), which is an animal welfare group in the United States. The farm was the first animal farm of any kind – including dairy, swine, poultry, beef and sheep, to score 100 percent on an audit back in 2009. Since then, AHA's annual audits, which are unannounced and welcomed by the dairy, have resulted in three more perfect scores.

"Animal and food safety work hand in hand," says Price. Kleinpeter adds, "We expect perfection. If you think it's important for the humanity of the animal, it's even more important for the customer."

"The auditors check us on 1,282 different points, including the cleanliness of the facility, the health of our animals and the nutrition they receive. Of course, we work closely with veterinarians to make sure every cow stays healthy, and we keep detailed computerized records on each cow," says Price.

Every 20 minutes, water flushes out the barn and moves the waste to a nearby lagoon where it is then used to fertilize crops. While the waste water serves as a natural fertilizer, it also keeps disease down because the cows are in a cleaner environment. Kleinpeter is also the recipient of numerous state and national environmental awards.

Kleinpeter supports the Louisiana agricultural industry as well. Kleinpeter ice cream uses Ponchatoula strawberries, Bergeron pecans, Aunt Sally's pralines, Elmer's chocolate, Bruce Foods sweet potatoes, Community Coffee, Ruston peaches and Louisiana blueberries and honey to flavor their ice cream.

Kleinpeter currently has 3,000 customers ranging from grocery and convenience stores to schools and hospitals in Louisiana and Mississippi and is working to branch out in other states. Kleinpeter Dairy Farm will celebrate it's 100th anniversary in 2013.

So what's really in a name over at Kleinpeter Dairy Farm? A happy cow and ultimately, a happy customer.
